FOREWORD

TO THE CLASS:

Herewith is presented the Twenty-Fifth Anniversary Report of the Class of '85, being Report VII of the secretary.

It is intended as a permanent record of many facts, besides a statement of the activities of members during the period since the publication of the last report.

The Class "lives," the pictures, the tables and statistical matter have all been gathered and made especially for purposes of record, in conformity with a practice among the classes in their twenty-fifth anniversary reports, which has been developing for the past twenty years and reached the present completeness of treatment a very few years ago.

Because of the size of the book no attempt has been made to reprint in form adapted to date Professor Gardiner's excellent monograph, and map, "Harvard, 1885-1905," published in Report VI, pp. 117-137 inclusive, or any similar treatment of university development.

In preparing for this anniversary and report the secretary has had some touch with every member of the Class except Collins, and with every temporary member except Ferris.

Such as it is, with no claims and with no apologies, this report goes out as requested and directed by the Class for publication at Commencement, 1910. With it go hearty thanks for and full appreciation of the assistance which the men in responding have rendered to make this book possible.

HENRY MORLAND WILLIAMS,
Secretary.

RECORDS OF THE CLASS

REGULAR MEMBERS

VICTOR CLIFTON ALDERSON

SON OF ANDREW PETER and SARAH PARSONS (SEARS) ALDERSON. Was born at Plymouth, Massachusetts, June 4, 1862. Entered college in July, 1881, from Boston Latin School.

After graduation he went West as superintendent of the public schools of Dublin, Indiana. After two years he became principal of the Englewood High School, Chicago. In 1893 he was elected professor of mathematics in the Armour Institute of Technology, Chicago, and five years later was promoted to be dean of the Technical College of that institution. He contributed much to the success and high standing of the Armour Institute. In 1903 the Colorado School of Mines called him to the presidency and he took up his residence at Golden, the first man graduating in '85 to become a college president. He has made a careful study of technical education and made several journeys to Europe for that purpose. Lectures, addresses, and extensive writings have brought the fruits of his investigations before the public. He is a member of the Geological Society of America. In 1903 he was made Doctor of Science by both the Armour Institute and Beloit College. He writes: "I have little time for anything but work, although Colorado is called the playground of the country."

RICHARD ALDRICH

SON OF ELISHA SMITH and ANNA ELIZABETH (GLAD-DING) ALDRICH. Was born at Providence, Rhode Island, July 31, 1863. Entered college in July, 1881, from Providence High School.

"In August, 1885, I became a reporter on the Providence Journal. On this paper I did many kinds of work, — musical, dramatic, art and literary criticism, and editorial writing, besides legislative reporting. In January, 1888, went to Europe, and stayed till end of December, 1888; largely spent the time in study of music. Returned to Providence Journal, but in December, 1889, became private secretary of United States Senator Nathan F. Dixon. Stayed with him in Washington till March, 1891, when I went on staff of New York Tribune as reporter. In two months was made sub-editor on telegraph desk. Was subsequently night exchange editor, assistant day editor, Sunday editor, assistant literary editor, and all that time acted as assistant to musical editor. In October, 1902, was appointed musical editor New York Times, and have since occupied that position. On October 3, 1906, married Margaret Livingston Chanler, sister of Winthrop Chanler, '85. Went to Europe in 1907. The rest of the time has been uneventful except for the birth of a son last May. Spend time in the summer and autumn at Rokeby, Barrytown on Hudson, the Chanler homestead, and in winter in New York, hard at work in my profession of musical critic, which seems to become more and more arduous and exacting every season."

*ARTHUR LINCOLN ALLEN

SON OF WILLIAM HENRY and ANNA LOUISA (RAMSDELL)
ALLEN. Was born at West Cambridge, September 28, 1863.
Entered college in July, 1881, from Arlington High School.

In college he was known as a good companion, ready for recreation or a good time rather than as a hard student. He acquired, however, the faculty of mastering a subject quickly, and had a good knowledge of men and affairs. The next three years were spent at the Harvard Law School, where he took the LL.B. degree. In the same time he had passed the Suffolk Bar examinations. After a year in a law office and a trip to the Southwest, he opened a law office in Boston. Sound judgment, close application, and a genial disposition gained for him a steadily increasing practice. Marriage to Bertha C. Partridge of Gardiner, Maine, followed soon, and then in a short seven months his death at his old home in Arlington, after a sickness of less than three weeks, on May 16, 1892. Their daughter was born August 1, 1892. His college circle was a small one, for he preferred the friendship of a few rather than the acquaintance of the many. In the family counsels he was the leader and adviser to whom all could turn for sound advice and worldly experience, and upon whom his relatives had learned to depend. And so his influence had begun to spread in Arlington in those few years he was given to practise law. Just when the future seemed so full of promise, death ended all.

See Report III., page 9.

HORACE DAVID ARNOLD

SON OF GEORGE JEROME ARNOLD, M.D., 1861, and ANNA ELIZABETH (BULLARD) ARNOLD. Was born at Roxbury, November 4, 1862. Entered college in July, 1881, from Roxbury Latin School.

"The first three years after graduation were spent at the Harvard Medical School working for the degree of Doctor of Medicine. Then came two years of service in Boston hospitals as house-officer, followed by two years of service as Assistant Superintendent of the Boston City Hospital. This completed my preliminary medical training, and I married in 1892 and began private practice in Boston, settling first in the Roxbury section. At first I did a general family practice, but later devoted special attention to the heart and circulation. In 1896 I first began teaching at Tufts College Medical School, and in 1900 was made Professor of Clinical Medicine in that institution. This led to a broadening of my work to a general consulting practice rather than narrowing to a specialty. In 1903 I moved to a more central location on Beacon Street, Boston, and have resided there since. After holding some minor clinical positions at the Boston Dispensary and other institutions, I was appointed Physician to Out-Patients at the Boston City Hospital in 1896. In 1901 I was advanced to the position of Assistant Visiting Physician, which I still hold. My position as a teacher in Tufts College Medical School (Professor of Clinical Medicine) led me to take an interest in medical education, and I have had an active share in the rapid and satisfactory development of that school. I have also been interested, as a member of various committees in State and National Associations, in the broader questions of the improvement of medical education throughout the country. In 1908 I was chosen to act as State Medical Director for Savings Bank Life Insurance for the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. This new idea of life insurance is an interesting sociological experiment, and it has very great possibilities for benefit to the community at large. The ultimate success of life insurance must depend largely on the proper administration of the medical side of the question, and the work therefore involves a good deal of responsibility besides being of very great interest. Success in the practice of medicine in Boston means hard work, close application, and little 'play.' There is not much that is exciting or of general interest in the routine life of a busy physician."

CHARLES HEATH ATKINSON

Son of EDWARD and MARY (HEATH) ATKINSON. Was born at Brookline, July 2, 1862. Entered college in July, 1880, from Roxbury Latin School.

After graduating from college he spent nearly a year and a half in the study of mechanical engineering at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology as a member of the class of 1887. Then his health broke down, and he has since been living quietly.

HORACE DAVID ARNOLD

CHARLES HEATH ATKINSON

CLARENCE WALTER AYER

CLARENCE WALTER AYER

SON of WALTER and ABBIE WEST (STEVENS) AYER. Was born at Haverhill, May 29, 1862. Entered college in July, 1881, from Haverhill High School.

“Of the twenty-five years since graduation I was a teacher for the first eleven and a librarian for the last fourteen years. During the first year out of college and a part of the second I taught languages at Dummer Academy, near Newburyport. The third year out I returned to Harvard for a degree of A.M., which I received in 1888, taking courses in English and Italian, and becoming a private tutor in English and college preparatory studies. In addition I served for a while as musical critic of the Boston Advertiser, and published in the Musical Herald for April, 1887, a four-part song for male voices, entitled ‘The Dreamer,’ for which I also wrote the words. This has proved to be my only venture of the kind. For the next four years I continued graduate studies in English and related languages, including Old Norse, Gothic, and Old French, serving as proctor in the college for three years, and working as private tutor. In 1892 I left Cambridge to become acting professor of English at Wittenberg College, Springfield, Ohio; in 1893-5 I was instructor in English at the College for Women of Western Reserve University, Cleveland, Ohio. While there I read at the meeting of the Ohio Modern Language Association, held in Columbus, December, 1893, a paper on ‘The Growth of the English Romantic Movement during the Eighteenth Century,’ which was published by the Association and also separately printed. I also compiled a pamphlet of ‘Illustrative Extracts in Rhetorical Criticism’ for use in class work. In 1895 I returned East, to become instructor in English at the Volkmann School for Boys, in Boston. In 1896 I accepted a position in the Harvard College Library, my first work being the reclassification of the music collection, which was followed by that of Italian history and literature, and by other related groups of modern languages which had not then been done. My shelf-list classification of the music was copied, by request, for the Library of Congress and other large libraries, as a contribution to the bibliography of the subject. In 1899 I joined the Harvard Musical Association of Boston. From 1899 to 1904 I was librarian of the Brockton Public Library. In 1901-2 I served as vice-president of the Massachusetts Library Club, and at its meeting in Boston, October 31, 1901, I read a paper on the 'Shelf-classification of Music,' which was published in the Library Journal for January, 1902. In 1904 I came to my present position as librarian of the Cambridge Public Library. In that year I was chosen a member of the New England Historic Genealogical Society, and a director of the Cambridge Social Union; in 1905 I became a member of the Cambridge Historical Society, and from 1907 I have been its curator. In 1908 I collaborated with Dr. William J. Rolfe, who was then a trustee of the library, in the publication of a 'History of the Cambridge Public Library,' on the occasion of the semi-centennial celebration of its establishment, April 1, 1908. During the whole time three trips abroad were made, the first in the summer of 1893, the second in the summer of 1894, and the third, with Mrs. Ayer, in the summer of 1903. A similar sketch of my life appears in 'Who's Who in America,' in 'Who's Who in New England,' and in 'Men and Women of America.'" He is now president of the Massachusetts Library Club.

WILLIAM FRANCIS BACON

SON of JOSEPH NEWMAN and SARAH ANNA (WOODWARD) BACON. Was born at Newton, November 27, 1863. Entered college in July, 1881, from Newton High School.

"After graduation I spent a year in recreation and travel, while trying to decide what occupation I wished to pursue. As the law seemed attractive, I entered the Harvard Law School in the fall of 1886 and took the full three-years' course. During the third year in the Law School I took the Suffolk Bar examination, and was admitted in January, 1889. After graduating from the school, I opened a law office in Boston. Have followed my profession constantly ever since, and with increasing interest. I have not attempted to specialize, my practice having been general. I find, however, that my time is being devoted largely to corporation and probate matters. In 1891 I married, and built a residence in Newton, which I still occupy with my family. Having always lived in Newton I have naturally had many local interests there, but have never entered actively into public life. For several years was a member of the Board of Health of that city, which position I resigned, and was appointed an associate justice of the local Police Court, and am still serving in that exalted capacity. Have been active in the local banking concerns, and am pretty firmly anchored by real estate interests, which require attention out of all proportion to the return received from them. I have found opportunities for moderately extended vacation trips with Mrs. Bacon in this country and in Europe. We try also to break into each winter by a shorter or longer Southern outing. At my summer cottage on the north side of Cape Ann I get recreation for two or three months of the year, and with some golf in spring and fall, and bowling in winter, have managed to keep in generally good physical condition. To sum up the twenty-five years in one sentence, mine has been on the whole a comfortable, uneventful life, with as little friction with my fellowman as an attorney in active practice can reasonably expect."

STEPHEN ARNOLD BAILEY

Son of JAMES MADISON and MARGARET FRANCES (DOBINS) BAILEY. Was born at Lindley, Missouri, August 25, 1864. Joined our Class as a sophomore, having previously been a special student.

" Taught French and German in St. Paul's School, Garden City, Long Island, year after graduation. Received degree of LL.B. from Harvard Law School in 1889. Came to Telluride, Colorado, in September, 1889, and have resided here ever since, excepting years of 1899-1900 spent in Denver, Colorado, and 1901-02 in Kansas City, Missouri. Was married May 27, 1894, to Cornelia Ellen Parker at Newton, Massachusetts, and have two children. — Stephen Parker, born March 1, 1902, and Anna Frances, born January 13, 1905. Principal employment has been with The Telluride Power Company, which has power plants in Colorado, Utah, and Idaho. Am expecting to move in the near future to Salt Lake City, Utah, where this company has an office." He has been the treasurer of a county school district, and is a director in several corporations.

*WILLIAM HENRY BALDWIN

SON OF WILLIAM HENRY and MARY FRANCES AUGUSTA (CHAFFEE) BALDWIN. Was born at Boston, February 5, 1863. Entered college in July, 1881, from Roxbury Latin School.

At the time of his death, January 5, 1905, Baldwin was not only the most conspicuously successful member of our Class, but he had accomplished more real service than any other man in it. After a few months in the Harvard Law School in the fall of 1885, he accepted a position with the Union Pacific Railroad, and before the end of his first year had taken up work at the offices in Omaha, Nebraska. From that time forward his advancement as a railroad man was both steady and rapid. He became finally a division superintendent on the Union Pacific Railroad, and left that road to become the general manager of the Flint & Pere Marquette Railroad, with headquarters at Saginaw, Michigan. In 1894 he made his next change, and became the vice-president and traffic manager of the Southern Railway, with his headquarters at Washington. Two years later he went to New York to succeed Austin Corbin as president of the Long Island Railway. It was in New York that he began the career both as a far-sighted railroad man and as a public-spirited citizen, which attracted the attention of the whole country. During that period he had a part in almost all of the transportation problems of greater New York, including the questions of rapid transit, railroad terminals, dockage, and elimination of grade crossings. He never lost his interest in the problems of civic betterment. He was chosen chairman of the celebrated "Committee of Fifteen" which investigated the social evil in connection with the tenement house problems of greater New York, and his services to the Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute and on the General Educational Board are notable examples of his disinterested public spirit. There never was a better Harvard man. Everywhere he went he was the organizer of Harvard or University Clubs, or the inspirer of enthusiasm among Harvard men. His service to this Class as chairman of its Class Committee was great, and often rendered at considerable expense of time and effort on his own part. Since his death his memory has been perpetuated in several ways. Since the last report the Tuskegee Baldwin Memorial Fund to the amount of over $150,000 has been paid to that institution, and in 1909 a bronze memorial tablet was dedicated to his memory at Tuskegee. The first publication from the income of the Eighty-Five Baldwin Memorial appeared in 1908, entitled "The Lodging House Problem of Boston," by A. B. Wolfe, Ph.D., associate professor of Economics and Sociology in Oberlin College, sometime holder of the South End Fellowship of Harvard University. The annual William H. Baldwin prize of the National Municipal League has been awarded each year, and has brought out some very interesting and instructive monographs on municipal government. The memorial volume of his life will be published in June.

HENRY BARTLETT

SON OF CHARLES EDWIN ADAMS and HARRIET MARIA (COOPER) BARTLETT. Was born at Lowell, March 29, 1864. Entered college in July, 1881, from Lowell High School, Boston Latin School, and under private tutors.

"Not having been a traveller or explorer I have no sensational experience to relate, my career having been confined exclusively to the railroad service. A short time after graduation found me in the shops of the Pennsylvania Railroad at Altoona, Pennsylvania, as an apprentice, where after three years and a half in that capacity I was promoted to assistant road foreman of engines of the Pittsburgh Division of that road, and it was during this time that I participated in the terrible experiences of the Johnstown flood. Thereafter I was assistant road foreman of engines of the Middle and Maryland Divisions of the Pennsylvania Railroad until June, 1891, when I was promoted again to assistant superintendent motive power of the road at Altoona, where I remained till January, 1895, when I became superintendent motive power of the Boston & Maine Railroad at Boston, and thereafter general mechanical superintendent of the same road in January, 1907, my present position. In August, 1907, my son Moulton, fourteen years old, died suddenly of pneumonia, a terrible loss to my wife and self. Since 1895 have spent my summers at Marblehead, and in November, 1907, began living in Cambridge to be nearer my office headquarters."

STEPHEN SMITH BARTLETT

Son of JOHN BISHOP and ELIZA DAVIS (SMITH) BARTLETT. Was born at Boston, February 14, 1861. Entered college in July, 1881, from Roxbury Latin School.

"After graduation I spent a year abroad in company with Carpenter, Hansen, MacArthur, and Sanford. On my return in the fall of 1886 I entered the Harvard Law School, graduating in 1889. Since then I have been practising law in Boston. In May, 1897, I was married to Marion Nickerson Swan of Boston. I have two children, a boy and a girl."

FERDINAND WINTHROP BATCHELDER

Son of GREENLEAF WILLIAM and ELIZABETH (STAPLES) BATCHELDER. Was born at Boston, May 3, 1862. Entered college in July, 1881, from Boston Latin School.

"The principal incidents of my life since graduation were my marriage to Bessie T. Clark on June 15, 1886, and the births of my daughters, — Elizabeth, December 10, 1890, and Ruth, October 26, 1894. For a few years I was employed by Messrs. H. F. Dutton & Co., bankers & cotton ginners at Gainesville, Florida, starting as firemen at their power-house and passing through various grades, including a clerkship in their bank, to assistant foreman of their ginning plant. Afterwards I secured a position as clerk with Messrs. Hatch & Woodman, General Agents of the Travelers' Insurance Co., in Boston. During dull summer seasons

I had made hunting trips with my father through the West, prospecting for mines and lands, and in 1891 I became a settler of Oklahoma, assisted my father in his building operations in Oklahoma City, 'made the run' into the 'Cherokee Strip,' where I secured a 'claim' (160 acres), farmed it, was appointed postmaster at Cross, and was active and fairly successful in politics and real estate in Kay County. Returning again to Boston in 1895, I have served the United States Coal and Oil Co., the United States Smelting, Refining & Mining Co., and the American Zinc, Lead, & Smelting Co., as secretary or treasurer, up to the present time. The world looks good to me." For the past fifteen years his work has developed and broadened along the line of growth of these closely related mining companies. He is the treasurer or secretary, or both, of an increasing list of them. He was first treasurer of the United States Oil Co., now the United States Coal & Oil Co. Then came the United States Mining Co. group, now developed into the United States Smelting, Mining & Refining Co. Among its affiliated companies are American Exploration Co., American Zinc, Lead & Smelting Co., the Centennial-Eureka Mining Co., Peruvian Mining, Smelting & Refining Co., United States Lime Co., Almendral Copper Mining Co., Mammoth Copper Mining Co., and the United States Smelting Co. In many of the companies he is also a director. In these companies Storrow is also interested as a director and member of the Executive Committee, and last December Jennings was chosen vice-president in charge of the engineering exploration work. Batchelder lives in Weston, has his office in Boston, and is a devoted expert golf player, and a member of several golf clubs.

LORING WOART BATTEN

Son of THOMAS GASKILL and EMELINE (ZANE) BATTEN. Was born at Mullica Hill, New Jersey, November 17, 1859. Entered college in July, 1881, under the tutorship of C. W. Duane.

"Fitted for the ministry in the Philadelphia Divinity School. Took a graduate course in Philosophy at the University of Pennsylvania. Was rector of a small church in Philadelphia for a short time. Soon called to teach the Old Testament in the Philadelphia Divinity School, and remained there from 1888 to 1899. Came to New York as rector, but for six years have been called upon again to take up teaching in my special field. My children have grown up in this period. My oldest son is a second classman at the United States Naval Academy, and the younger one is a Freshman at Harvard. My daughter is preparing for Vassar. I have found the supreme satisfaction in my life in the opportunities for service to my fellow men, — opportunities greatly increased in the past two years by the introduction of the Emmanuel movement in New York." Professor of Old Testament Interpretation and Literature in the General Theological Seminary and rector of old St. Mark's Church, Second Avenue and Tenth Street, New York City. He is a trustee of St. Luke's Home and a manager of the Church Temperance Society.

HARRY CLAYTON BEAMAN

SON of PHINEAS ALDEN and HARRIET (THOMPSON) BEAMAN. Was born at Princeton, Massachusetts, March 9, 1863. Entered college in July, 1881, from Williston Seminary.

"On looking over the twenty-five years since the good Class of '85 left Harvard, I find very little to chronicle in my life which is likely to be of interest to my classmates. My business (The Wachusett House) has kept me in the little hill town of Princeton, where the simple life is naturally led, since there is no other. The only variation has been a few winters spent in the South, on a fine old plantation in Georgia. My family of one girl and three boys has been growing up, and two of the boys are already Harvard 'men,' with the other looking forward to the time when he may enter. That is all, but it is something!"

JOHN WHEELER BEMIS

SON of JONATHAN WHEELER BEMIS, A.B., 1830; M.D., 1834, and LUCY COOLIDGE (WYETH) BEMIS. Was born at Charlestown, September 21, 1863. Entered college in July, 1881, from Joshua Kendall's Private School.

HARRY CLAYTON BEAMAN

*JOHN WHEELER BEMIS, 1902

In college he was an enthusiastic football player on his freshman eleven, and played quarterback on the university eleven in his senior year. He was a member of the Shooting Club, Institute of 1770, and the Hasty Pudding Club. After graduation he decided upon architecture as a profession and for two years studied in offices in Boston and as a special student at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. In 1887 he went to Paris, and entered the École des Beaux Arts. There, and at the Atelier Pascal, he worked for two years, stood very high, and received several medals and a first mention. His vacations were spent in travel and study. Upon his return in 1890 he became connected with the firm of Chamberlain & Whidden, but being obliged to assist his father in the care of his estate remained with them only a short time. In 1892 he bought a farm at Temple, New Hampshire, where he and his family spent their summers after his marriage. This place became more than any other his home. The work of reclaiming and improving it was perhaps his greatest interest and keenest pleasure. His health first broke down during the winter of 1891-92, when he was obliged to go South for a milder climate. In June, 1893, he married Leslie L. Fisher of Boston. He lived in Jamaica Plain, and later in Boston. In 1893 he became assistant instructor under Mr. Langford Warren in the department of architecture at Harvard University. He held this position for two years. From 1895 to 1900, when he finally gave up work on account of his health, he was the architect of a number of houses in the vicinity of Boston, and of Brimmer Chambers in the city. His condition grew steadily worse, and in February, 1900, he went South again. In June of the same year he went to the Loomis Sanitarium at Liberty, New York. In October, 1901, he rejoined his family in Weston, where he remained until his death, November 25, 1902. He was a member of the St. Botolph, Union Boat Club, and Union Club of Boston, the Boston Society of Architects, and the Society of Beaux Arts Architects of New York.

See Report VI., page 35.

ROBERT SLOAN BICKFORD

"Studied law one year at the Harvard Law School. Engaged in business and teaching until 1892. In that year made an extended trip through the West, and remained in Montana for nearly three years, where I held the positions of private secretary to the Governor of Montana and secretary of the Board of Land Commissioners. Returned to Boston in the fall of 1895, and have been in business here since that time." Business at first mining securities, now stocks and bonds. Has been much interested in graduate Delta Upsilon, and has been president of the New England Club of that fraternity. Lives at Wellesley Hills.

"On a sheep ranch in Kansas from September, 1885, to June, 1886. In business in New York (Brazil trade) from January 1, 1887, to September 1, 1903. Since September 1, 1903, have resided in Woodstock, Vermont." Served on the staff of Governor Bell of Vermont with the rank of colonel. In 1909 was instrumental in forming the Harvard Club of Vermont.

CHARLES WESLEY BIRTWELL

SON of TEMPEST and SARAH (PICKELS) BIRTWELL. Was born at Lawrence, Massachusetts, November 23, 1860. Entered college in July, 1878. Joined our Class as a senior, from Class of 1883.

Birtwell entered Harvard College, Class of '82. In his senior year illness interrupted his course, so that he was graduated with the Class of '85, receiving a degree summa cum laude. Deliberately choosing philanthropic work when such a choice was less common among university men than now, Birtwell went directly from Harvard into the service of the Boston Children's Aid Society, of which, since September 1, 1885, he has been the executive officer. During this period the Society has become one of the leading charitable organizations of the country. Birtwell was married October 16, 1894, to Miss Helen Dow, Hampton Falls, New Hampshire, at the home of the bride, the Governor Weare house, built in 1737, now the summer home of the family. The first year after their marriage he and Mrs. Birtwell lived in Boston, and in October, 1895, moved to Brookline. Their son, Roger, was born May 19, 1901. In 1891 Birtwell visited England and France for the study of charities and industrial education. He is one of the lecturers of the New York School of Philanthropy, conducted by the Charity Organization Society of the City of New York, and of the School for Social Workers, Boston, maintained by Simmons College and Harvard University. In 1896-97 Birtwell was a member of the "Advisory Board on Public Institutions of the City of Boston," appointed by the mayor. He has served upon the boards of directors of the Massachusetts Prison Association, the New England Watch and Ward Society, the South End House, the North End Union, and other organizations, and has been an active member of the State and National Conferences of Charities and Correction. He was one of the two editors of "The Care of Dependent, Neglected, and Wayward Children," being a Report of the Second Section of the International Congress of Charities, Correction, and Philanthropy, Chicago, June, 1893; Baltimore, The Johns Hopkins Press; London, the Scientific Press. Birtwell was engaged by the State Board of Education to assist in an investigation, in 1896, of school attendance and truancy, and to draft needed legislation on truancy, truant schools, and allied subjects for a report in 1897, of which he was one of the two authors, — "Report of the State Board of Education, by special order of the Legislature of Massachusetts, relative to School Attendance and Truancy. House Document No. 1259, May, 1897." He was an associate editor of the Charities Review from 1897 to 1903.

Birtwell was president of the Monday Evening Club — a club of paid officers of the charities of Boston and vicinity — November, 1893, to November, 1895. The club was organized at Birtwell's suggestion in March, 1888, and he was its first secretary. Its usefulness has prompted the organization of a similar club in each of the larger cities of the country. Birtwell was president of the Channing Club of Boston, October, 1896, to October, 1897, and has been secretary of the Unitarian Club of Boston since January, 1899. Birtwell originated the Home Libraries, so called, in 1887, in connection with his work for the Boston Children's Aid Society. This scheme of home clubs among poor children has now been adopted in many cities of the country under the auspices either of charitable societies or public libraries. From its organization in 1894 Birtwell has been connected with what is now called the "Social Service Committee" of Harvard University, formed for the purpose of guiding and stimulating student volunteer charity work, as its executive director until 1904, and still as adviser to students offering themselves as volunteers. Birtwell was one of a board of seven named in the will of Miss Belinda L. Randall of Boston, who died in 1897, to manage or distribute the residue of her estate, amounting to $382,000, as they should see fit, for educational and philanthropic purposes. The burden of Birtwell's work has been development of the activities and influences of the Boston Children's Aid Society in behalf of homeless, exposed, arrested, or otherwise unfortunate children and youth. From its staff men and women have been called to positions of responsibility with various other charitable undertakings in different parts of the country. Birtwell has given much attention to legislation in regard to dependent and neglected children, probation, juvenile courts, compulsory education, truancy, child labor, and related subjects.

SON OF JOHN FRANCIS and SUSAN LUCRETIA (DUTTON)

GEORGE RICHARD BLISS

ABNER ZAZA BOWEN

FRANK JOSIAH BOWMAN

1859. Entered college in July, 1881, under the tutorship of Isaac L. Rogers.

“In July, 1885, I was appointed messenger of the Judges of the Municipal Court of Boston. I held this position until October, 1886, when I became a student in the office of Judge George Z. Adams. I was admitted to the Suffolk Bar in February, 1887, and since then I have practised law continuously in association with Judge Adams under the firm name of Adams & Blinn. During all this time our office has been at 30 Court Street, Boston. June 3, 1886, I was married to Clara Augusta Pollard at South Newmarket, New Hampshire. Our home has always been in Bedford, Massachusetts.” He was formerly a member of the School Committee of Bedford, and is now president of the Bedford Free Public Library. He is a member of the University Club of Boston.

ABNER ZAZA BOWEN

SON OF ABNER and FRANCES ANN (CUTTER) BOWEN. Was born at Loami, Illinois, July 26, 1859. Entered college in October, 1881, having prepared himself.

“When leaving college I resolved never to report to the Class until I had accomplished something of which the entire Class would be proud. But, as our secretary is so amicably insistent I am constrained to break that resolution upon this the twenty-fifth anniversary of our graduation. Continued teaching in New York from autumn of 1885 until my admission to the Bar, May, 1889. Member of the Republican force of ‘Spell Binders’ in the Harrison campaign of 1888. Winter of 1890–91 organized the New York Evening Law School, now the Evening Department of the New York University. March, 1892, went to Europe on a business deal. Returning, entered the real estate office of Col. Henry L. Turner, of Chicago, where I continued until 1898, meanwhile making another trip to Europe in 1895. In 1898 made various trips over the western part of the United States, mostly in the interest of mining propositions. Financed one large deal, but was defrauded of the larger share of the profit by a banker who later deliberately ruined his own bank and is now a fugitive from justice. Then became interested in building a railroad from Chicago to Seattle, made another trip to England, and contracted bonds therefor, but the fellows at the other end of the line fell down, and it is now being built by the Milwaukee. Later trips have taken me to Central America and almost to the North Pole. Am at present located in Spokane, and when the travel germ attacks me again I expect to make Japan and the Orient my objective. During these twenty-five years I have been simply a student, my reading has ranged over philosophy, medicine, politics, and current events. I have gone so deeply into philosophy that I can tell the difference, at sight, between a pragmatist and a predatory politician. Have made some important discoveries or inventions which will be made public at the proper time. Upon money matters I have always been negligent. But, one moment of the glorious inspiration of working for one's country and humanity is worth more than a century of life devoted to the selfish enjoyment of wealth, regardless of the fact that people hold one in higher esteem, if he has large wealth, than they do on account of any benefits he may confer upon the public. Practise law a little, but I am especially interested in the wonderful apple of Washington and the Columbia River country, and shall be delighted to send information upon the subject to any of my classmates who may be sufficiently interested to write me. Upon this our twenty-fifth anniversary, I find myself in perfect health, and years and years younger than at graduation, and just ready to begin the important work of my life. Before the next triennial report is due, I hope to have the pleasure of inviting you to a wedding."

FRANK JOSIAH BOWMAN

Son of EDMUND and MARIA PATIENCE (ADAMS) BOWMAN. Was born at Sterling, Illinois, July 10, 1859. Entered college in October, 1881, from Berkeley School.

"After graduation I studied law with the firm of Bennett & Green, at Sterling, and was admitted to the Bar in January, 1888. Then accepted a position with this firm, and Mr. Bennett retiring, I continued with it until in May, 1901, upon the retirement of Mr. Green, I succeeded it. In connection with my law practice I invest extensively funds of clients in farm loans. Have not been actively engaged in politics, and the only public position that I ever sought and held was that of city attorney of Sterling. In short, my life since graduation has been characterized mainly by a close adherence to the practice of law, and in this I trust I shall be able to continue for many years."

ROLAND WILLIAM BOYDEN

SON of WILLIAM COWPER and AMY LYDIA (HOAG) BOYDEN. Was born at Beverly, October 18, 1863. Entered college in July, 1880, from Salem High School.

"After graduating from the Harvard Law School in 1888 I practised for a year in Salem and then came to Boston. In 1894 I became a member of the firm of Ropes, Gray & Loring, now Ropes, Gray & Gorham, and have since continued practice with that firm under exceptionally enjoyable conditions. For some years I kept up active interest in baseball as a member of the Beacon nine of Boston, and in football as a member of the Boston Athletic Association; but this is now ancient history, and I am relying upon hand-ball, tennis, and golf to keep my weight within reasonable limits — with indifferent success, I may add. I have spent my vacations on my farm at Tamworth, New Hampshire, or in travel. My life has been a happy one, but devoid of incidents striking enough to be of interest to others." He has been a member of the Harvard Athletic Committee, a candidate for overseer, and a director of the American Unitarian Association, and is a director and officer of various corporations in Boston and Beverly.

CARLETON BRABROOK

SON of GEORGE and ELIZA HALE (KNOWLES) BRABROOK. Was born at Taunton, February 10, 1863. Entered college in July, 1881, from Bristol County Academy.

He spent the greater part of the first three years after graduation in study and travel in Europe, particularly at the universities of Göttingen and Heidelberg, at Paris and Seville. Two years following spent at Columbia Law School gave him the degree of LL.B., and in another year he was admitted to the New York Bar in 1891. He then returned to his home in Taunton and took his part with Reed and Barton, the celebrated silver and plate manufacturers, with which concern he remained for seventeen years. His health then broke down and he has not been able since to do any business.

MARTIN LUTHER BRADFORD

SON of MARTIN LUTHER and ABBIE CHILD (GARDNER) BRADFORD. Was born at Dorchester, November 6, 1861. Entered college in October, 1881, from Roxbury Latin School.

“We all knew him for the next four years. As vice-president of our class, as an athlete, musician, and student, he was closely identified with all those associations which we now hold so sacred. He was a member of the D. K. E., the Alpha Delta Phi, and Hasty Pudding Club, and took great interest in music as the president of the Pierian Sodality. His studies were principally confined to Chemistry, Natural History, and German, as he always had in view a careful preparation for the study and practice of medicine. In the fall of 1885 he entered the Harvard Medical School, and was associated with Storer, Dunham, and Mumford in special work. In the summer of 1886 he was an assistant at the Boston Dispensary. In the fall he was made an assistant in surgery in the Out-patient Department of the Massachusetts General Hospital. In the early spring of 1887 he was interested in special histological work. Later he was elected to Dr. Green's class in obstetrics, and gave special attention to practical obstetrics. It has been difficult for some to understand why he, who had everything to live for, and who had shown exceptional ability in his profession, should have found his life a burden. It developed, however, that in the last fortnight of his life he passed through an intense mental and physical strain, by attempting to accomplish more than was possible. The result was complete nervous exhaustion, from overwork and loss of sleep. The sights he saw and his comparative powerlessness to relieve the suffering of his patients wrought too powerfully upon his sensitive and sympathetic nature; but his proud, brave spirit did not give way until his complete mental and physical exhaustion made the outlook seem utterly hopeless. Every detail of his work was carefully attended to until the last moment of his life, and his friends had no warning of his purpose. On the twentieth day of June, 1887, he took his life at his room on McLean Street, Boston. When death comes to one of our number whose life was the essence of purity and manliness, we pay tribute to ourselves by honoring him. The life of Martin Luther Bradford, Jr., was an example of modesty, earnestness of purpose, and strength of character. These qualities, combined with a high moral and religious ideal, commanded the love and respect of all who knew him." W. H. B., Jr.

CHARLES FRANKLIN BRANDT

SON OF DANIEL REEDER and MARGARET JANE WALDRON (JONES) BRANDT. Was born at Wilton, New Hampshire, April 11, 1861. Entered college in July, 1881, from Brooklyn College and Polytechnic Institute.

During his college course he was known as a long-distance runner on the Mott Haven team and in cross-country running but had a comparatively small acquaintance among his classmates. He studied law at the Columbia Law School and in the office of the late Nelson J. Waterberry. He first opened his office in New York City, but four years later moved to Brooklyn and continued in practice there until a few months before his death, which occurred at Brooklyn November 3, 1908. During all his professional life he was affiliated with the Democratic party, and although he never held political office he was prominent on all legal committees and much in demand as a forcible and convincing speaker at political gatherings. In 1896 he was nominated by the Democrats of his district for Congress, but was defeated by Francis Wilson, who later became postmaster. In that campaign he was the only Democratic Congressional nominee who received the endorsement of the Brooklyn Eagle. He was married to Emma B. James at Morristown, New Jersey, May 10, 1898, but had no children. Mrs. Brandt survives her husband.

WILLIAM FREDERICK BRIDGE

SON of WILLIAM FREDERICK BRIDGE, A.B., 1846; Divinity School, 1849; A.M., 1850, and ELIZABETH GUILD (CROSBY) BRIDGE. Was born at Dublin, New Hampshire, January 12, 1861. Entered college in October, 1884, as a senior, from University of Cincinnati.

A New Englander by birth all his mature years were spent in Ohio. He took a preparatory course at Antioch College and graduated from the University of Cincinnati in 1884. During all the course he had worked in the Mercantile Library of that city. While Bridge was with our Class only during its senior year, occasional ill health had affected his work and his standing so that he remained at Cambridge another year, receiving his A.B. then as of the Class of '85. He achieved success in English, and continued his studies in Chaucer at his home in Foster's, Ohio, till his death on May 21, 1890. This came at the end of a lingering but ever progressive case of consumption, which dated back at least to his college days. Through it all he was ever cheerful. This quality, with his enthusiasm for noble causes and charity towards others, made a marked impression upon his necessarily somewhat limited circle of friends.

FREDERICK HARRIS BRIGGS

SON of ALBERT DWIGHT and CAROLINE (CLAPP) BRIGGS. Was born at Springfield, July 13, 1862. Entered college in July, 1881, from Adams Academy.

WILLIAM FREDERICK BRIGGS, 1890

*FREDERICK HARRIS BRIGGS, 1890

“After leaving college Briggs remained for a year at home in Springfield. He was then persuaded to go to San Francisco, where he assumed charge of the pictorial department of the Daily Examiner. For this work he displayed extraordinary aptitude, and the many hundreds of cuts which he produced while in the Examiner's employ were uniformly excellent. But the work of newspaper artists is for the main part drudgery, the limitations within which they must labor are obviously restricted, and Briggs, becoming at last impatient of the narrowness of the newspaper field, determined to return East, hoping to find more congenial employment in New York. His health, however, had been much impaired by an attack of the grip, which left him nervously and physically exhausted, and, as it befell, he came back home only to lay down the life which, it is the conviction of his friends, contained the promise of a brilliant future. He was stricken with pneumonia the third of October, 1890, and died after an illness of three days at New York. The intelligence of his death came as a severe shock to those who knew him best, and who awaited with confidence the fulfilment of that promise as an artist which he displayed to us, during his college days, in the pages of the Lampoon. As a caricaturist, Briggs was certainly the most talented of the men of his time at Harvard. He drew familiar faces with humor, and many of us, doubtless, still have in our possession his ingenious likenesses of John the Orangeman, Oscar Wilde, Henry Irving, Langtry, Théo, and of several members of the Faculty. We must all remember with pleasure the double-page cartoons of Briggs. Collectively they would form almost a pictorial history of the significant events of our day, and we will particularly recall his treatment of the French opera, which we all went wild over, the return of our victorious ball-team, and the first outrages committed by the Athletic Committee. . . . He drew continuously for the Lampoon, from the third number that appeared after his entrance into college to the very last issue of the paper in his senior year. He also belonged to the Hasty Pudding Club, for which society he painted the excellent play-bill, commemorating '85's performance of Joan of Arc, which now occupies a conspicuous place on the walls of the new theatre.”

HUGH HENRY BROGAN

SON of JOHN and WINIFRED (MALONE) BROGAN. Was born at Killala, Ireland, October 12, 1861. Entered college in July, 1881, from Lowell High School.

“After graduation I travelled and studied abroad for six years, during part of which time I held the Tyndall Scholarship for the special study of physics from Harvard. In 1891, while at Strasburg University, I received the degree of Doctor of Philosophy magna cum laude. On my return I taught physics for one year at the Washington University, St. Louis, Missouri. Then I spent several years at Harvard as a private tutor. After being engaged for some years in the real estate business at Lowell, Massachusetts, I received in March, 1907, an appointment in Washington as assistant in the Nautical Almanac Office at the United States Naval Observatory, where I am at the present time.”

*ARTHUR LANGMAID CALHOUN

SON of JOHN REUBEN and SARAH GRANVILLE (LANGMAID) CALHOUN. Was born at St. John, New Brunswick, August 15, 1861. Entered college in October, 1882. Joined our class as a senior, from Class of '84.

“After an absence of a year, during which he was at work in other lines, he graduated with '85. In 1887 he became associated with the Boston Evening Traveller, and in the following year he made a trip through Eastern Europe, reports of which were contributed to the Traveller, the New York Sun, and other papers. In 1891 he moved to Tacoma, where he held for two years an editorial position on the Daily Ledger. The close confinement of office work began to tell on his health, and he left the paper to accept an appointment as English master in the City High School. In 1894, owing to the failing health of his father, he returned to St. John and entered business. Upon the death of his father in 1898 he disposed of his interests in St. John, moved to Wolfville, Nova Scotia, and established there the Beaver Mills. The business had just started and was an assured success, when on the morning of January 10, 1899, while superintending some work at the grain elevator, he met with a fall which resulted in his instant death. He was married November 20, 1889, to Miss Margaret Ellis, daughter of John V. Ellis, Esq., of St. John. His wife and two children, Margaret and Sarah, survive him." H.

FREDERIC IVES CARPENTER

SON OF WILLIAM OSCAR and LUCETTA (SPENCER) CARPENTER. Was born at Monroe, Wisconsin, November 29, 1861. Entered college in July, 1881, from Chicago Central High School, and under the tutorship of Paul Shorey.

"The usual vacillation after graduation for a couple of years, trying this and that, travel abroad, reading law, reading literature, and what not; then a few years in active business; then at the academic life full tilt till 1905; since then a mixture of academic and business cares, with a growing inclination for my Sabine fields — that is about all there is to my record. Media tutissima via — whether safest or not, it is the inevitable way for most of us. And so next June I hope to meet again those many others of us who are on the same way, and (after due laudations and libations to those at the top who have done things and of whom we are proud) to commune with them and exchange the placid sentiments and moralizations of contented middle age. Life is pleasant, things in general don't grow less interesting, we have our little satisfactions — what a lot of wisdom we shall have to disburden ourselves of! And then there is the next generation, — our next generation, — who are on the way to take our places. We must talk about them — to them the torch and the race. Yes, I anticipate a joyful reunion. I hope we can pass that portentous milestone of middle age resolutely and with enthusiasm." Professor of English in the University of Chicago, an editor of "Modern Philology," president of several land and iron companies of northern Michigan. He now divides his residence between Chicago and his farm of one hundred and twenty acres at Barrington, Illinois.

CHARLES FREDERIC CARRIER

SON of AUGUSTUS HART and SUSAN ANN (BANDELLE) CARRIER. Was born at North East, Pennsylvania, December 27, 1862. Entered college in July, 1881, from Indianapolis Classical School.

“ In the summer of 1885 I went to Germany and matriculated in Leipsic University, where I remained two semesters. The next two semesters I spent in Berlin. I was entered in the law departments of these universities. After some European travel I returned to America, and took the first year in the Harvard Law School. I came to Santa Barbara in 1888, was admitted to the Bar in April, 1889, and then entered into partnership with Garrett T. Richards, a lawyer of established practice in Santa Barbara, with whom I have practised law in Santa Barbara ever since. In 1896 I married Miss Emily H. Baker, and we have one child, a daughter. For nearly twenty years I devoted myself unremittingly to the practice of my profession, but latterly I have sought to take an active part in the community life. My professional work has brought me into contact with not a few Harvard College and Law School men. Aside from occasional vacation trips and the social life of the place, my time has been passed in the routine of giving advice, settling controversies, winning and losing cases, which makes up the career of the general practitioner. The outcome now at middle age is an established reputation and a fair competence.” The record of activities in the community life appears more fully in the Class record of public service in this report.

ROYAL PHELPS CARROLL

SON of JOHN LEE and ANITA (PHELPS) CARROLL. Was born at New York, October 29, 1862. Entered college in July, 1881, under the tutorship of R. F. Pennell.

CHARLES FREDERIC CARRIER

ROYAL PHELPS CARROLL

JOHN DERTHICK CARY

His first six years were largely spent in travel, hunting, and adventure in Europe, Africa, and Asia. Then he was married, and in 1893 took up yachting vigorously. His Herreschoff 84-footer Navahoe raced in England, and brought back the Brenton Reef cup won from the Prince of Wales' cutter, Britannia. For a dozen or more years the Navahoe, at times as sloop and later as yawl, figured from time to time, and Carroll was at one time rear-commodore of the New York Yacht Club. Before 1905 he had sold the Navahoe to a German gentleman, who raced her in German waters. Of the Spanish war he wrote: "The Spanish-American war brought hopes of some slight relief from the monotony of the piping times of peace, but although the government was good enough to commission me as lieutenant in the navy, I was unable to add any glory to the records of our Class through the hard dealings of fate. Although with the fleet in front of Santiago up to the evening of July 2, the Neerark, on which ship I served, left for Guantanamo that evening in company with the Massachusetts, and we were there the next day when the gallant Cervera and his squadron came out to meet their destruction. Barring a little shelling of the works about Santiago and a spirited bombardment of Manzanillo on the last day of the war, I have nothing more to say except that the government shortly after gave me my discharge with the thanks of the department." Now he is travelling again in Africa. He is a member of many of the leading clubs of New York City.

JOHN DERTHICK CARY

SON OF EDGAR and HARRIET HANNAH (JOHNSON) CARY. Was born at Richfield Springs, New York, May 20, 1859. Entered college in October, 1884, as a senior, from Hamilton College.

Cary went back to Richfield Springs to help his father in the summer resort business of that well-known town,—a business in which he has stayed and now conducts on his own account. He has served as a district school commissioner, as president of the local Board of Education, and upon commissions. Hamilton College made him an A.M. in 1887. He writes: "I have two occupations outside of earning my board and playing duplicate whist. One is trying to induce Sunday-schools to adopt some educational system of management and teaching; the other is building with some six or seven thousand small cement blocks the most elaborate structure I can and then taking them down to begin another with the same blocks. I'll recommend the first to all Sunday-school superintendents; and the latter to all cranks with the building craze."

ARTHUR PATTERSON CHADBOURNE

SON of WILLIAM and ISABEL ANTOINETTE BATES (PATTERSON) CHADBOURNE. Was born at Boston, December 18, 1862. Entered college in July, 1881, from J. P. Hopkinson's Private School.

He took the full course and his M.D. at the Harvard Medical School and followed it with a full hospital experience and study abroad covering a period of over seven years. He then had an office in Boston, and also did work as an assistant at the Medical School. His avocation has always been ornithology, and a remodelled farmhouse in Scituate, with broad fields and woods, gave him a splendid field in which to exercise this scientific pursuit for about half of each year. After his first marriage, about four years ago, he gave up his medicine on account of the delicate health of his wife and has since made his home or headquarters at or near Peterborough, New Hampshire. He was married a second time last winter.

ALLEN HOWARD CHAMBERLAIN

SON of CHESTER and MINERVA BURSE (SPAULDING) CHAMBERLAIN. Was born at Foxcroft, Maine, December 5, 1861. Entered college in July, 1881, from Phillips Exeter Academy.

"I graduated from the Harvard Medical School in June, 1888; was interne in the Massachusetts Charitable Eye and Ear Infirmary for the two years ending April, 1890; then I hung out my M.D. sign in Kansas City, Missouri, where it remained until June, 1891." Returned to his native town, Foxcroft, Maine, and has practised there since. "There is little variation in my life from one year to another — not painfully monotonous. Am not now [1910] very active in the practice of medicine. Am still unmarried, though not a misogynist. In reading I find my chief refuge from loneliness. No travels nor publications."

WINTHROP CHANLER

SON of JOHN WINTHROP and MARGARET (WARD) CHANLER. Was born at New York City, October 14, 1863. Entered college in October, 1881, under the tutorship of William C. Simmons.

"After my marriage in 1886 I lived in New York, Rhode Island, and Rome, Italy until 1903, when I settled down at Geneseo, Livingston County, New York. Since then I have passed part of each winter either in New York City or Paris or Rome. In 1898, during the Spanish War, I accompanied an expedition sent by the United States Government to take supplies and arms to Gen. Maximo Gomez. While reconnoitring I was shot through the arm. A few days later we came into touch with General Gomez and successfully landed the supplies. The expedition was known as the second 'Florida' expedition and was in command of Lieut. Carter Johnson of the 10th Cavalry. In December, 1908, I was in Rome, when the earthquake which destroyed Messina and Reggio, Calabria, took place. I with other Americans and Italians went to Messina to do what we could under the general direction of our ambassador, Mr. Lloyd Griscom. After about a fortnight in Messina I returned to Rome, and later went to Reggio, Calabria. Here I remained over six weeks constructing houses and distributing a fund supplied by the American Red Cross through Ambassador Griscom. For this work I was awarded a silver medal by the American Red Cross, and also made a Chevalier of the Crown of Italy. At present I am leading the ordinary life of the average American citizen, hoping for something to turn up before

I get too old to take a hand." He is the treasurer of the Roanoke Rapids Power Co. of North Carolina, and a trustee. He is a governor of the Knickerbocker Club of New York and a member of other clubs.

THOMAS HERBERT CHASE

Son of THOMAS CHASE, A.B., 1848; LL.D., 1878, president of Haverford College, and ALICE UNDERHILL (CROMWELL) CHASE. Was born at Haverford College, Pennsylvania, April 17, 1864. Entered college in October, 1884, as a senior, from Haverford College.

He spent a year at Harvard in the graduate department. Then, after six months of European travel, he went into business in New York, first with publishing houses and later with Taber & Co., importers of marble, until 1895. Since that date most of his time has been devoted to teaching, which he now claims as his profession. For several years of this period his work was at Cambridge, but a year ago he moved to Chicago. In 1898 he spent about six months in Berlin.

HORACE CLARK

Son of LEMUEL BALDWIN and MARY JANE (WOODRUFF) CLARK. Was born at Buffalo, New York, November 4, 1862. Entered college in October, 1881, under the tutorship of Wilson and Kellogg.

"Graduated from Harvard University Medical School in June, 1888. Studied Obstetrics in Boston Lying-In Hospital, and spent two years in Germany studying medicine. 1891-93, assistant surgeon Throat Department, College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York City; 1893-98, special practice at Buffalo, New York, surgeon Charity Eye, Ear, and Throat Hospital. During this period published a number of monographs upon technical subjects. Was married in October, 1899, at Jamestown, North Dakota, to Margaret Posey. Margaret Majella Clark was born at Jamestown, North Dakota, December 12, 1900. In April, 1900, moved to Pierre, South Dakota, where I practised medicine for four years. Then bought a ranch in North Dakota, and conducted that, along with medical practice, until 1908, when I rented the ranch and removed to Lemmon, South Dakota, about one hundred miles south, and once more engaged in active general practice. This is one of the coming towns of the West. My practice is good, and having made several investments, I am likely to remain here for some time. I have enjoyed uniformly good health all along, and do not yet begin to feel the effect of advancing years."

LEONARD BROWN CLARK

SON of SAMUEL FROST and LOUISA MARIA (BROWN) CLARK. Was born at Weston, September 8, 1862. Entered college in July, 1881, from Newton High School.

"After graduation I entered the Harvard Medical School in the autumn, taking the three years' course. During the year 1888-89 I was house officer at the Worcester City Hospital, and took the M.D. degree in June, 1889. For six months following I practised medicine in Hardwick, and then moved to Waverley in February of 1890 and have since resided there. In 1894 I was appointed on the staff of the Waltham Hospital. During December, 1896, my health broke down, and for several years the practice of medicine was rather uphill work, but I kept steadily at it in spite of frequent interruptions. In 1900 I was appointed one of the physicians to the Waltham Baby Hospital. During 1902 I spent about three months abroad travelling on the continent, and returned in much better health. Since then life has been the usual steady grind of general practice and hospital duty, relieved once or twice a year by a few weeks' outing with friends in Maine or at the seashore, or an occasional trip to New York or Washington. At one time the town elected me a member of the board of health, and I am now serving on the school committee, and as trustee of the Public Library."

JOHN CODMAN

SON of WILLIAM COOMBS and ELIZABETH (HURD) CODMAN. Was born at Boston., January 16, 1863. Entered college in July, 1881, from Phillips Exeter Academy.

At Exeter he was prominently identified with athletics, having been captain of the football eleven. On entering college he was elected president of the Class of '85, and held that office until he left college at the end of his junior year. He was captain of the freshman eleven and played end rush on the varsity eleven in his sophomore and junior years. In the fall of 1883 he scored a touchdown for Harvard against Yale in New York, that being the only score made for Harvard in the game. He took an active part in the college life, and was a member of the Institute, D. K. E., H. P. C., St. Paul's Society, and associate member of the Pierian and of the Glee Club. In October, 1884, he went abroad and spent the winter in Pau, returning to Boston in April, 1885. His health prevented him from taking his final examinations, so that he was not able to get his degree until 1886. He entered the real estate business with his father and became a member of the firm of Codman & Freeman in February, 1886. The firm later became Codman & Codman, and was so conducted until the time of his death. In addition to the active duties of his business he set himself the task of studying law, and in spite of much discouragement passed the examinations and was admitted a member of the Suffolk Bar in June, 1896. He gave considerable time to writing, and published several able and interesting articles and stories in the New England Magazine and elsewhere. During the last year or two of his life he prepared an historical work, "Arnold's Expedition against Quebec," which was subsequently published. He joined the First Battalion of Cavalry, Troop A, commonly known as the Boston Lancers, and put a great deal of his characteristic energy into the development of the military efficiency of that organization. On April 4, 1894, he was married at Christ's Church Cathedral, St. Louis, to Miss Caroline Morton Briggs of that city, and had two children. In the winter of 1897 he was taken seriously ill with heart trouble, from which he never rallied. His pluck and his strong constitution made the struggle a long and painful one until the end, which came on August 31, 1897.

all four years with Sam Winslow in Matthews. He was a member of the Hasty Pudding, Zeta Psi, and D. K. E.; also of the Lampoon board as a business manager, and of various other organizations. For ten years after leaving college he was in the textile business, three of those years with the Cleghorn and Orswell mills of Fitchburg, then for two years with Deering, Milliken & Co. of New York, and from 1890 to 1895 as treasurer and agent of the Fitchburg Manufacturing Company. He was president and general superintendent of the Union Machine Co. until 1903, and president and manager of the Union Screen Plate Co., both of Fitchburg, and president, treasurer, and managing director of the Union Screen Plate Co. of Canada. It was these companies and this work which gave his mechanical genius full play, — a genius which took delight as a recreation in automobiles and automobiling. His interest in athletics did not end when he left Cambridge. He was the founder of the Fitchburg Athletic Club, its vice-president, and later its president. He also was fond of golf. He was a member of the Boston Athletic Association, University and Harvard Clubs of Boston, and of the Park Club of Fitchburg. After graduation he retained a strong feeling for his class and the college, and always enjoyed the class and collegiate gatherings. He died at Fitchburg, February 7, 1910.

This last sentence barely indicates his activities in the public behalf. He was for six years till 1906 on the Boston School Committee, and for two years, 1902, 1903, was president of that body. He is now in his fifth term in the legislature as a representative from ward 11, Boston. GEORGE FAUNTLEROY DAVIDSON, 1900

In college he took high rank as a result of his ability and faithful attention to his work. This kept him apart from much of the broader social life of the undergraduates, and prevented him from making a large acquaintance. He was a member of Phi Beta Kappa, and of the Harvard Union. After leaving college he spent a year in the Harvard Law School, and in the fall of 1886 returned to California and entered the law department of the University of California, Class of '87. In February his health gave out as the result of overwork, and for the rest of his life it was one struggle with physical conditions. His eyes were the source of much of the trouble, and in his efforts to gain relief and the use of them he underwent more than thirty operations. He tried in turn, as his health permitted, yachting, farming, and mines and mining after July, 1895. In pursuit of relief he came East in 1893, and for more than a year he was in New York under the treatment of a specialist. In July, 1899, he laid off to recuperate, and make a final effort to get his eyes into some sort of painless use; but he had pushed himself too hard when able to do anything, reserving nothing to recuperate on, and the result was complete mental and physical exhaustion. He died at Napa, California, April 28, 1900. He had never married.

FREDERIC ADRIAN DELANO

SON OF WARREN and CATHERINE ROLLINS (LYMAN) DELANO. Was born at Hong Kong, China, September 10, 1863. Entered college in July, 1881, from Adams Academy.

“There is n't much to tell which all my classmates don't know. I have continued in the railroad profession, and in so far as I have accomplished anything, it is simply additional evidence that slow and steady progress will attain results in time,—the old tortoise and hare incident over again. I have in the meantime done a fair share of public service work in the community in which I live,—Chicago.” He began his railroading at the bottom in the locomotive erecting shops of the Chicago, Burlington, and Quincy Railroad Co. at Aurora the fall after he left college, and rose through application to his work and on his merits to be general manager of that company in 1901. The successive steps had given him a wide experience after the early stages. They were superintendent of the Chicago Terminal Division at Chicago, superintendent of freight terminals, superintendent of motive power and machinery. He resigned from the Chicago, Burlington, and Quincy Railroad in 1905. In a few months he was selected to head the Wabash Railroad Co., of which he has now been president for nearly five years. He is also president of the Wabash, Pittsburg Terminal Co. For the past two years his fellow railroad leaders of the country have honored him by making him president of the American Railway Association. This association comprises three hundred and thirty-eight railway companies operating two hundred and forty thousand miles. He early became an authority on the construction, and later, on the management of railways. In 1905 Secretary Taft selected him as railroad expert in connection with contracts and bonds for the construction of the Philippine railroads. In 1909 President Taft offered him the post of United States minister to China. This honor he declined in order to keep to his railroad work. Delano has been the leader among the Harvard men west of the Alleghanies. Overseer of Harvard, director of the Alumni Association, president in turn of the Harvard Club of Chicago, 1902, the Associated Harvard Clubs and Union League Clubs of Chicago, 1906, are offices he has held or is now holding. Chairman committee of overseers on the graduate school, committee for raising Charles W. Eliot fund and Shaler memorial; also projector and patron of the Charles W. Eliot medal by Leon Deschamps, vice-president American Unitarian Association, director of various banks and corporations are others of his activities.

PAUL SHIPMAN DRANE

SON OF GEORGE CANNING and MARY (SHIPMAN) DRANE. Was born at Louisville, Kentucky, January 13, 1863. Entered college in July, 1881, having prepared himself.

He taught for two years in Kentucky at the Dudley Institute, Frankfort. In 1887 he took up his journalistic career in New York City as a reporter on the New York Sun. He has been on the staff of the New York Herald for a number of years.

WILLIAM KINNICUTT DRAPER

SON OF WILLIAM HENRY and ELIZABETH WALDO (KINNICUTT) DRAPER. Was born at New York City, February 2, 1863. Entered college in July, 1881, from Adams Academy.

“After graduation I returned to New York City and began the study of medicine at the College of Physicians and Surgeons, the Medical Department of Columbia University, receiving, after three years, the degree of M.D. I then served in the Roosevelt Hospital as interne on the medical side for one and a half years. The next year was spent abroad continuing the study of medicine in Dresden, Munich, Berlin, and Vienna. On returning to New York in the autumn of 1891 I began the practice of medicine in this city, where I have since continued to live and work. In December, 1898, I was married to Helen Fidelia Hoffman. In the course of my professional work I have been Visiting Physician to the City Hospital on Blackwell’s Island, and was advanced from this position to that of Attending Physician on the First Division of Bellevue Hospital,—that connected with the College of Physicians and Surgeons. This position I now hold. I am also connected with the New York Orthopedic Dispensary and Hospital as Attending Physician, with the New York Memorial Hospital, and with the Minturn Hospital for Scarlet Fever and Diphtheria, as Visiting Physician. The position of Attending Physician at Bellevue Hospital entails teaching the students of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, which I have done for the past six years or more, and two years since I was appointed Adjunct Professor of Clinical Medicine in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University. For eight years I was a member of the Committee on Admissions of the University Club, for three years served on the Committee on Nominations of the Century Club, and at the present time am a member of the Board of Managers of the Harvard Club of New York. I have made several journeys to Europe for study and pleasure, and during my vacations have done some travelling, camping, shooting, and fishing in various parts of the United States, Canada, and Newfoundland. Thus have the twenty-five years since graduation passed,—quickly as I look back on them, and it is difficult to appreciate that it is so long since the day on which the degree of A.B. was conferred on me in Cambridge.”

THEODORE DUNHAM

SON of CARROLL and HARRIET ELVIRA (KELLOGG) DUNHAM. Was born at Irvington-on-Hudson, November 11, 1862. Entered college in July, 1881, from Columbia Grammar School, and under the tutorship of Charles C. Burlingham.

“On leaving college I entered the Harvard Medical School. On being graduated in medicine, I entered Bellevue Hospital in New York, where I passed through the various grades of the house staff on the Fourth Surgical Division. I then spent over a year studying medicine abroad, chiefly in Vienna.

THEODORE DUNHAM

PERCY DAVID DWIGHT

Returning to New York, I began the practice of medicine and surgery, and affiliated myself with the New York Post Graduate Medical School and Hospital. For some years I conducted a surgical dispensary in that institution. For many years now I have been a professor of surgery in that school and have been an attending surgeon to the babies' wards. Since my marriage I have spent the summers at Mt. Desert Island, Maine, practising chiefly in North East Harbor, Seal Harbor, and the neighboring territory. For three years I was at Seal Harbor; since then at North East Harbor, at which place I built a house in 1903. I have a passion for manual labor, both at the various mechanical trades and in agriculture, and I fully indulge this passion during the summer, with great benefit to mind, body, and soul. In New York I am permanently located at 48 East 63d Street. I have made some contributions to surgery, — chiefly new instruments or new methods of operating, — and my writings have been limited almost entirely to presenting these to the members of my profession." He is a member of numerous medical societies.

PERCY DAVID DWIGHT

Son of DAVID FISK and LUCRETIA SMITH (HOWE) DWIGHT. Was born at Detroit, Michigan, October 26, 1862. Entered college in October, 1881, under the tutorship of Dr. E. R. Humphreys.

When he had graduated he returned to Detroit, studied law, and was admitted to the Bar in 1887. He practised his profession for seven years, and then spent a year in foreign travel in Europe and northern Africa. Upon his return he abandoned the law and engaged in business as the treasurer of a knitting mill. Of his life since 1900 he writes: "I have been connected with the automobile business from its inception. One might say that we built some of the first automobile bodies in the country, our first order being for Henry Ford's first automobile. I am secretary and treasurer of the C. R. Wilson Body Co. of Detroit, which is one of the largest, if not the largest, automobile body plant in the country. I might say I have had pretty good success in a business way. Two years ago I built a fairly pleasant home on Burns Avenue. I am a large buyer of books, and my library, a large room, is lined from top to bottom with well-filled book shelves. During the last two years my reading has been directed toward a study of the higher criticism of the Bible. I am a member of the Detroit, University, Detroit Boat, and Fine Arts Clubs, and also the Literary Club."

EDWARD TYLER EDGERLY

SON of JOHN WOODS EDGERLY, A.B., 1855, and MARIA LOUISA (CHAMBERS) EDGERLY. Was born at Ottumwa, Iowa, January 15, 1864. Entered college in July, 1881, from Phillips Exeter Academy.

"During first year had a minor clerkship in Iowa National Bank, Ottumwa, of which my father (Harvard '55) was cashier; did some preparatory medical reading, and entered Chicago Medical College (Northwestern University), being graduated in the Class of '89; obtained an internship in Cook County Hospital, Chicago, where I was associated with H. F. Lewis, '85, who was also a close neighbor and friend while I practised in Chicago. I was married in Chicago, February 5, 1891, to Miss Nettie Thurston, and we set up housekeeping at 5031 Lake Avenue. I was demonstrator of Histology and lecturer on Physical Diagnosis for short periods in my medical alma mater. In 1893 I was a member of the medical staff of the World's Columbian Exposition, both during the construction and exhibition periods, and had many interesting experiences. My father's health failing in 1894 I accompanied him to Europe, and while he was at Carlsbad I spent a number of weeks in the hospitals of Vienna. As we were returning he died suddenly in Paris. Upon my return I found it necessary to remove to Ottumwa, Iowa, and assume charge of his business affairs, thus giving up my profession, and so continued, leaving a life devoid of interest to others, but always tinged with a regret at the change. personal experiences and influences combined to induce me to attempt the change back in 1908. It was a serious thing to do so late in life and the result is yet in doubt." President and Trustee of Central College, at Rolla, and a member of local school board.

JAMES LYMAN FISK

Son of JAMES CHAPLIN and MARY GRANT (DANIELL) FISK. Was born at Cambridge, June 24, 1862. Entered college in July, 1881, from G. W. C. Noble's Private School.

Soon after entering college his health became seriously impaired, and during his whole college course he labored under great disadvantage; but he persisted in his work, and took his degree with the class. Soon after graduating he left Cambridge and went to Saranac, in the hope that the change and a long vacation might prove beneficial; but in the following December his father's sudden death called him home and placed new responsibilities upon him, which he felt that he must assume. He entered the office of the Fiskdale Mills, in which his family were largely interested, and was made president of the corporation, which position he held until his death. It was almost entirely owing to his efforts that the class album was published. He had a strong class feeling, and was greatly interested in this work, devoting much time to perfecting it. It took several years to procure all the necessary material, and required a vast amount of correspondence. This work was practically finished before his death, and is one for which his classmates will always hold him in grateful remembrance. It was owing to his aid that several others were enabled to go through with their college course, and as far as lay in his power he was always ready and willing to aid others. He was of a cheerful, affectionate nature, a man of much business ability, and a true and loyal friend. He died suddenly of acute meningitis on July 17, 1893, while boating with two of his classmates on the Sudbury River.

See Report IV., page 23.

FRANCIS BRINLEY FOGG

SON OF GODFREY MALBONE and MARY (LAPE) FOGG. Was born near Jackson, Mississippi, June 18, 1864. Entered college in July, 1881, from Rogers High School, Newport, Rhode Island.

“After leaving Harvard I graduated at the Vanderbilt Law College and made the Methodist Bishop, the President of the University, encourage athletics. I organized a team to meet the Nashville Athletic Club eleven, and we played the first game of football south of the Mason and Dixon Line. I was the first president of the Vanderbilt Athletic Association and gave the university her present colors. This was the first move made in the South to put our boys into athletics. I made my maiden speech as a lawyer before the Supreme Court of Tennessee and won the case, and eight more cases afterward. Then I went into stock raising on a large scale, and the panic of 1893 killed that absolutely. Afterwards I was the manager of the Duck River Phosphate Company, which kept me very busy for several years. After that nothing of importance has occurred in my life.” He is a member of the Harvard Varsity Club.

GEORGE EDMOND FOSS

SON OF GEORGE EDMOND and MARCIA CORDELIA (NOBLE) FOSS. Was born at Berkshire, Vermont, July 2, 1863. Joined our class as a sophomore, having previously been a special student.

“In 1887 he was a student in Columbia Law School and School of Political Science, New York. In 1889 he was graduated from the Union College of Law, Chicago, where he won the prize for the best oration, and also honorable mention for the best legal thesis. In April, 1894, he first attracted public attention by a speech at the grand banquet of the Marquette Club. In 1894 he was nominated and elected to Congress from the Seventh Congressional District of Illinois, and in December, 1895, he took his seat in the House of Representatives. In 1896, after a great fight, he won his renomination in a convention which selected the first two delegates for McKinley in Illinois. In 1898 he passed through the House of Representatives the Personnel Bill, reorganizing the personnel of the Navy. In 1899 he visited the navy yards of England and Europe and made a study of foreign navies. In 1900 President McKinley offered him the Assistant Secretaryship of the Navy, which he declined. In 1900 he was made Chairman of the Committee on Naval Affairs, a position which he has held ever since. In 1901 he was prominently mentioned by the public press for the Secretaryship of the Navy and United States Senator. He declined to be a candidate for either. Since Foss became a member of the Naval Committee, practically all of the Navy has been built, and 700,000 tons of the total 910,000 tons of fighting ships of the Navy have been authorized by Congress. Since he became Chairman of the Committee, 1900, Congress has authorized 550,000 tons. He has been Chairman of the Naval Committee longer than any man before him, and is to-day the youngest chairman of a great committee in the House of Representatives. He has been called "the legislative builder of the American Navy." In 1908 he was a candidate for U. S. Senator, in the direct primary for the people of the State, and in a campaign lasting only six weeks, against competitors who had been candidates for two years, he ran second, receiving 121,110 votes. He is recognized as a man of political independence, who has fought successfully political bossism and stands for the highest ideals in public life."

SAMUEL LYNDE FOSTER

Son of SAMUEL and MARY DELANO CATHCART (LYNDE) FOSTER. Was born at Sacramento, California, March 16, 1863. Entered college in July, 1881, from San Francisco Boys' High School.

"Since graduation I have quietly and continuously followed the profession of electrical engineering, having been electrically responsible for the construction of half a dozen electric light plants in Michigan and California, about four hundred miles of city and interurban electric railroads in California, and reconstruction after the great fire in San Francisco, having been granted six United States patents on street railway devices, and having published a little string of articles on technical subjects. I had a three hundred page book on a hitherto unbooked engineering subject completed ready for polishing and illustrating in 1906 when, after being shaken up by our great earthquake, seeing $500,000,000 worth of property burned up and two hundred thousand people made homeless in three days, and after being involved in two sleepless years of the most bitter industrial strife in which the peaceful engineer laid aside his pencil and slide rule, put on a special officer's badge and a big army revolver, and on six occasions had to point it at his fellow man for his own protection or the protection of those with him, I found my surplus supply of vitality for book making sadly depleted. Like many Americans I have restlessly sought the fait accompli without sparing myself, and my hair is white to-day, but I am yet well able to continue year after year to make excursions alone into the Sierra Nevada Mountains and spend my vacations among some of the highest peaks, the most beautiful waterfalls and the greatest trees in this or any other country, descending the wonderful canyons and gorges in the Yosemite National Park usually considered impassable, carrying provisions, rope, fly rod, and numerous other conveniences necessary when spending two weeks away from civilization with only the sky for a roof in the undisturbed retreats of the bear, the mountain lion, the deer, and the rattlesnake. Gold I have not acquired, my treasures being my health, my good name, my home life, and my Harvard education, my appreciation of the value of the last often reminding me of Cicero's well-known 'haec studia . . . adolescentiam alunt, senectutem oblectant, secundas res ornant, adversis solatium et perfrugium praebent, delectant domi, non impediunt foris, pernoctant nobiscum, rusticantur.' I have been a persistent advocate of temperance, the 'strenuous life,' and the 'square deal,' and have eschewed politics, athletics, and religion. The principal incidents in my life since graduation have been my happy marriage and the grandly tragic events of 1906, 1907, and 1908 in San Francisco, which in my vivid memory seem like a horrible combination of the destruction of Pompeii, the burning of Rome, and the lawless reign of terror in Paris during the French Revolution. One of the few pleasant features of this terrible time was a telegram received by mail a few days after the earthquake from my classmate Roland Boyden in Boston, authorizing me to draw on him for any amount. That the kindly thoughts should go forth and the helping hand be extended across the continent so unexpectedly without the remotest impulse of blood, marriage, or business interests as an explanation was a revelation to me after twenty-one years of struggling with the sharks and sycophants of a selfish world. Every one in the class of '85 should be proud of having such a member as I am of having such a friend. When thanking him in reply I explained that I had not taken advantage of his generous offer for two reasons. One was because I had not been burned out and the other was because there was not a single bank or branch of a bank left in existence in San Francisco that day. The principal event in my whole life most indelibly and pleasantly impressed on my memory is the period covered by the four wonderful years of college life — the Elysian fields of existence — and I regret very much that I cannot be at the class reunion in Cambridge this year to renew the friendships of those sunny days."

AMOS TUCK FRENCH

Son of FRANCIS ORMOND FRENCH, A.B., 1857; LL.B., 1859, and ELLEN MARIA (TUCK) FRENCH. Was born at Roxbury, July 20, 1863. Entered college in July, 1880, under the tutorship of Arthur H. Cutler.

"In August, 1885, the Harvard polo team, on which Winthrop and I played, won the championship cups at Newport, and from this scene of gayety I fell with a dull thud — out of the frying-pan into the dust bin — and found myself in September in a gloomy railroad office in Richmond, Virginia. The hours were long and the work hard. I acquired some knowledge of accounting and considerable chills and fever, necessitating my return North after a few months. Was married in December, 1885, and read law in New York the following winter. Held the record in Alexander & Green's for the speed with which I read Blackstone. Was told it was not a novel. Entered Van Emburgh & Atterbury's brokerage office in May, 1886, and ran their branch office at Newport that summer. Settled at Hempstead, Long Island, early in 1887, and bought a seat on New York Stock Exchange. Was appointed treasurer of Manhattan Trust Co. in April, 1888, and settled down to hard work on a salary, and remained with that company, in which I had acquired a considerable interest, for twenty years. Fifteen years of this time I was vice-president. Retired from business January 1, 1908, in order to have time for my own affairs and for travel. Took my first real vacation in September, 1900—a six weeks' trip abroad. Since then have made inspection trips nearly every year over the Northern Pacific and Great Northern Railroads, and am much interested in the rapid development of the Northwest, where, by the way, there is an excellent opportunity for young men to make a living. Have been abroad several times, and pass much time at Chester, New Hampshire, where I have acquired my great-grandfather's lands. A hundred years ago many of the famous statesmen and lawyers of New Hampshire lived in Chester, but now it is a sleepy New England town of one street, shaded by elm trees, and surrounded by a lovely country, hill and dale, woodland and meadow. Since 1889 I have lived chiefly at Tuxedo Park, New York. I still have a house there, built in 1900, where my rather large family grew up, and where we still expect to live part of the time. My oldest daughter, the Class Baby, married Samuel J. Wagstaff, Harvard, 1908, in May, 1908, and my oldest son, Francis O. French, is at present a sophomore at Harvard." He is treasurer of the Harvard Club of New York and helped to raise the money for the University Boat House and the Harvard Teachers' Endowment Fund. He is a member of many clubs, among them the Knickerbocker and Tuxedo, and is a director of the Northern Pacific Railway Co., the Chicago, Burlington &

Quincy Railway Co., the Northern Securities Co., and the Manhattan Trust Co.; also a governor of the Lying-in Hospital of New York.

JOHN HAYS GARDINER

SON OF COL. JOHN WILLIAM TUDOR GARDINER, U. S. A., and ANN ELIZABETH (HAYS) GARDINER. Was born at Gardiner, Maine, April 6, 1863. Entered college in July, 1881, from J. P. Hopkinson's Private School.

"After graduation I had two years in the Harvard Law School; then my health gave out, and I was unable to do anything for five years. In 1892 I became an instructor in English at Harvard, and have continued in that work. I was made assistant professor in 1900, and the appointment was renewed for the second five years in 1905. My work has been chiefly in English composition, though I have usually carried on some work in literature besides. For the last three years I have had charge of the large course in English composition prescribed for freshmen, the last relic of the prescribed studies. My summer vacations I have usually spent in Maine, but twice I have spent them in Europe. During the year 1906-07 I had leave of absence, and made a journey round the world. My writing has been of the nature of gleanings from the work in my courses; it has consisted of three text-books in English composition, and one book on the English Bible, from the point of view of English literature." He gave a very successful course of lectures on "The Literary Power of the English Bible" at the Lowell Institute, Boston, which had to be repeated to satisfy the public demand. He was active in arranging for the open air production of Shakespearian plays in the college yard in 1903, and of "Hamlet," in Sanders Theatre, in 1904. He has been secretary of the Harvard Coöperative Society, and a member of the Library Committee of the Harvard Union.

CHARLES FREEMAN GILMAN

SON of JOHN FOLSOM and MEHITABLE (LEAVITT) GILMAN. Was born at Charlestown, January 12, 1862. Entered college in July, 1881, from Boston Latin School.

He joined the force at the Boston Custom House soon after graduation and has risen by merit to one of the more important positions. His avocation is whist, in which, as one of the cracks of the American Whist Club of Boston, he has a wide reputation. He has been active in the management of tournaments and as a writer on the subject. His home was formerly in Boston, but is now in Newton Highlands.

CHARLES BERTIE GLEASON

SON of CHARLES WILLARD and JENNIE GREY (STORY) GLEASON. Was born at Holden, December 8, 1862. Entered college in July, 1880, from Natick High School.

"The year following graduation was spent in graduate study at Cambridge; then for four years I divided my time between private school work and business. This period marks the zenith — and the close — of my public career. I was acting postmaster for nearly two weeks, and town constable for some nine months. Family health led to a removal to California in December, 1890. Nothing was further from my plans than to resume teaching. But business depression caused the failure of the enterprise into which my father and I had entered, and the establishment of a State high school system just at that time created openings not to be found in other activities. After four years in Redlands, I spent a sabbatical year at the University of California, acting as instructor in Latin and Greek, and at the same time pursuing my private studies. From Berkeley I went to Chino as Superintendent of Schools, and a year later was called to my present position, to assist in reorganizing a badly disrupted school. The pressure of work in a large and rapidly growing school has limited outside activities. My active interests have been almost exclusively confined to the Y. M. C. A., of which I was one of the organizers in this city, the Society of California Pioneers, and the several Masonic bodies. In these I have performed the tasks and received the honors that regularly fall to the active member. On the one hand, I stand no chance of rusting out; on the other, no more of accomplishing anything worthy of record." He is vice-principal of the San José, California, High School.

JOHN MCGREGOR GOODALE

SON of JOHN ADAMS and FANNY ABBY (ROCKWELL) GOODALE. Was born at Utica, New York, December 24, 1863. Entered college in July, 1881, from Utica Free Academy.

After graduation he took the Harvard Law School course and his LL.B. in 1888. While in the school he played on the University Lacrosse Team in 1886 and 1887. He settled in New York City and has been connected with several offices and firms. For a good many years the firm name has been Goodale & Hanson. He has been connected with various citizens' associations, and especially the Peoples' Singing Classes. He writes: "In 1905 and 1906 I ran off badly towards nervous prostration, and a slow recovery has taken my spare time ever since, while I have sought, during an eight-hour day, to maintain the dignity and privilege of working. I could not make the chronicle of such a life interesting if I tried. It is too much of a struggle simply to be normal, — not to be morose, not to covet your neighbor's ox, not to question the whole decalogue. I should speak of the pleasures I have had mixed in; one of them the occasional sight of the Class Secretary, and insight through him toward the spirit of the University."

ROBERT STETSON GORHAM

SON of DANIEL DUNKS and HANNAH MARY (STETSON) GORHAM. Was born at Champlain, New York, June 28, 1863. Entered college in July, 1881, from Northampton High School.

“The first year after graduation I spent at home in Northampton, Massachusetts, as student in the law office of John C. Hammond. The next two years I attended the Harvard Law School, where I received the law degree in 1888. Meantime I was admitted to the bar in Boston. Since leaving the law school I have been practising law in Boston with Boyden and other congenial members of the firm of Ropes, Gray & Gorham, formerly Ropes, Gray & Loring. I was married, June 26, 1890, to Alvine Johnson Thomas of Duxbury, Massachusetts. Our only child, Thomas Gorham, was born April 14, 1891, attended the Newton public schools, and is a member of Harvard, 1913. For the last seventeen years or so my home has been at West Newton, Massachusetts, close by Ed. Woods and near other Harvard friends. My public activities have been limited to membership on the Newton School Board, of which I was chairman for several years. My summers have uniformly been spent at Duxbury, Massachusetts, where we maintain an ancient summer house. Both Boyden and I feel that fate has been kind to us. We join in asking all classmates to drop in on us about one o'clock and go to lunch with us.” In the Law School he pulled on the University tug-of-war team at the Mott Haven games. He was also one of the editors of the Harvard Law Review. Is secretary of the Boston Bar Association. Was president of the Neighborhood Club of Newton, which acted as host for a number of prominent English tennis players. Is a member of the Class Committee. He has been a member of the council of the Harvard Law School Association and a candidate for Overseer.

WALTER FOLGER GREENMAN

SON of GEORGE WASHINGTON and SARAH WOOD (FOLGER) GREENMAN. Was born at Nantucket, January 21, 1865. Entered college in July, 1881, from Chelsea High School.

“Since graduating from the Harvard Divinity School in 1888, I have had pastorates of three years in Winona, Minnesota, eight and one-half years in Fitchburg, Massachusetts, the same in Watertown, Massachusetts, and since October 1, 1908, I have been minister of the First Unitarian Church of Milwaukee, Wisconsin. In each parish the work has not only permitted but required considerable participation in the local activities for civic betterment. Work among Italians, state and city charities, and criminology have been the chief elements. In addition to this, as intellectual knitting work, I have lectured on the interpretation of literature and fine arts. At two different times, in 1898 and 1906, with my family I have had four months' vacation in Europe. In summer I am a vegetable gardener in a very small way in Lunenburg, Massachusetts, where we manage to see many of our old Massachusetts friends during July and August." Is secretary of the National Conference of Unitarian and other Christian Churches, and is president of the Harvard Club of Milwaukee.

FRED SUMNER HAINES

SON of JOHN SHERBURN and THEODATE (NOWELL) HAINES. Was born at Somersworth, New Hampshire, September 23, 1860. Entered college in July, 1881, from Phillips Exeter Academy.

He went West at once to Rochester, Minnesota, and has lived there ever since, with the exception of a year in Elmira, New York, and four years in the neighboring town of Mantorville, Minnesota. He first engaged in banking, then in life insurance, but in 1895 he took up the telephone. He is president and general manager of the Rochester Telephone Company, and a director of the Rochester National Bank, of which in the early days he was assistant cashier. He is interested in Masonry. Some summers he takes his family to his old New Hampshire home.

WALTER ALLEN HALBERT

SON of DELANCEY MORELL and SARAH RAYMOND (MORGAN) HALBERT. Was born at Ottawa, Illinois, January 28, 1862. Entered college in October, 1881, from Phillips Andover Academy.

“Since the latest Class Report, my time has been devoted to my business, which is that of an appraiser of real estate and student of values. In the last twenty-five years I have neither married, nor written a book, nor received a degree from an institution of learning, nor held an office. In the course of my business, it has been necessary for me to assume responsibilities in the affairs of other people. Perhaps that fact has influenced me to avoid responsibilities of my own. My report to the Class is, therefore, one of negation. And yet the world seems more amusing, more interesting, and in every way more attractive than it did twenty-five years ago.” Lived first at Binghamton, New York, then at Kansas City, Missouri, and has latterly made his headquarters at Chicago. For three years he served the class efficiently as its Class Secretary, preparing the first and much of the second Class Report. He resigned when he left New York State for the West.

WILLIAM ALEXANDER HAMMOND

SON of ARCHIBALD and AGNES (OGLEVEE) HAMMOND. Was born at New Athens, Ohio, May 20, 1861. Entered college in October, 1884, as a senior, from Princeton College.

After three years spent as a lecturer in classics at the University of King's College, Windsor, Nova Scotia, he went to Germany to study the literature and philosophy of the ancients. He took his Ph.D. at Leipzig in 1891. In the following February he was made assistant professor of Ancient and Mediæval Philosophy at Cornell University, and in due course became Sage professor of Classical Philosophy at Cornell. He has been secretary of the Cornell faculty much of the time, and has been a member of the executive council of the American Philosophical Association. His sabbatical year, in 1899-1900, was spent in London and Berlin. His writings appear in the list of publications. He writes that “for five years I have been president of the Ithaca County Club, where golf and administrative business on a miniature scale have provided me with a quiet, idyllic avocation. I wish you all the best and jolliest of times. The days of '85 are to me a kind of Homeric Age. There were heroes then. I never permit myself to look at the Class through the wrong end of the telescope."

OTTO RHEINHARDT HANSEN

SON of GUIDO JACOB and MATHILDE (SIEFERT) HANSEN. Was born at Kilbourn, Wisconsin, April 19, 1863. Entered college in July, 1881, from Milwaukee High School.

"From 1885 to 1886 I studied Roman law and philosophy at Heidelberg and Berlin, and after that returned to Cambridge and spent two years at the Harvard Law School, when failing health obliged me to remain inactive for four years until the year 1892. Since then I have lived in Milwaukee practising law, for the first ten years in association with Joshua Stark, who was a graduate of Union College in the year 1848. My homestead, however, is now thirty miles west of Milwaukee, on Oconomowoc Lake, where we live for about five months in the year. Of late, particularly, with my family I have avoided the strenuous northern winters by going South, spending one winter in the Bahamas, two in Algeria, one in Georgia, two in Italy, and one in France. On the other hand, when in the United States, business interests have taken me to the Pacific coast, to Arizona, Idaho, Nebraska, and Montana, where I have learned to know and admire the great and rapidly developing West. It has also been my endeavor to acquire wherever possible some of the unearned increment of land in several of the western States before public policy requires that it be set aside for the benefit of the State at large. It is not with unmixed emotions of joy that I look forward to our approaching reunion. Shall we not, on seeing strange faces answer to familiar names, feel that we have lost old friends, and can we in those few days make new friends with the persons bearing the old names?"

CHARLES MATHER HARRINGTON

SON of HENRY STEWART and HANNAH JANE (ADAMS) HARRINGTON. Was born at Middleport, New York, October 22, 1860. Entered college in July, 1881, from Phillips Exeter Academy.

" On graduation I had already decided to turn my attention to the law. I came to Buffalo, entered the law offices of Williams & Potter, and a few months thereafter those of Day & Romer, as a clerk, and served my apprenticeship. I was admitted to the bar in 1887, and began the practice of my profession on my own account in October, 1888. I have been at it ever since with more or less of success. In 1899 I formed a partnership with John L. Romer of the old firm of Day & Romer, and that business connection still continues. We have made no particular specialty, our business being somewhat general, although we have been fortunate in having the handling of several large estates. I have proved neither a Solon nor a Cicero, but have been reasonably busy, and have, I trust, achieved an honorable position in this community. To walk uprightly, deal justly, and labor assiduously are some of the prime requisites of a lawyer; these have been my aim, and I hope the goal has been attained. I have argued several cases at the Appellate Division of our Supreme Court and at our Court of Appeals; two before the United States Circuit Court of Appeals in New York City, and one before the United States Supreme Court, to say nothing of work before our lower courts. I expect to argue two more cases shortly before our Court of Appeals involving considerable sums. This merely to let you know I'm busy doing something. I have not sought nor desired public office. But home life is best of all, — three sons, two daughters, and a wife, gentle, affectionate, and devoted, — these are my jewels, and I wear them next my heart. My benediction on those classmates likewise blessed, and words of hope and cheer to those to whom such gifts are denied. The oldest son is a freshman at Amherst College this year, but I expect him to enter the Sophomore Class at Harvard next year. He is only seventeen years old, and was hardly mature enough to enter Harvard this fall. My other two sons are looking forward to entering Harvard, one in two years, and the other in five years from this fall, provided at all times the purse is sufficiently filled. You will find prose and poetry in the foregoing sketch, just as in life; openly we mostly disclose the prose, the poetry being kept in secret retreat, like the choicest gifts in the temples of old. To you, my classmates, ever green in memory, I fain open thus slightly the secret fountains of a happy life, and I make you one and all an offering on the shrine of perpetual esteem and affection."

JAMES MOTT HARTSHORNE

SON OF JAMES MOTT and SARAH LLOYD (TAYLOR) HARTSHORNE. Was born at New York City, February 3, 1864. Entered college in July, 1881, from Phillips Exeter Academy.

"After graduating from college, I worked for a couple of years in a broker's office, without pay, to learn the business. In May, 1888, I bought a seat in the New York Stock Exchange, and later became junior member of the firm of White & Hartshorne. I retired from the firm July 1, 1895, because of ill health. In 1901 I sold my Stock Exchange membership and gave up active business." Is a member of the Union, Tennis and Racquet, and other clubs in New York.

DANIEL LYMAN HAZARD

SON OF THOMAS GEORGE and MARY KING (BROOKS) HAZARD. Was born at Narragansett Pier, Rhode Island, August 26, 1865. Joined our class as a sophomore, having previously been a special student.

"After spending two and one-half years as book-keeper, I was associated with my brother, T. G. Hazard, Jr., in land surveying at Narragansett Pier, Rhode Island. In December, 1889, I came to Washington and entered the employ of the Massachusetts Topographical Survey Commission, and was assigned to duty at the Office of the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey in computing the triangulation required in the determination of the town boundaries of the State of Massachusetts. Upon the completion of this work, in the summer of 1892, I obtained a position as computer in the Coast and Geodetic Survey, which I still hold. Except for brief assignments to field duty in 1900 and 1904, and an annual vacation spent at my home at Narragansett Pier, I have lived uninterruptedly in Washington since 1889. I am still unmarried. I am a member of the Cosmos Club, the Harvard Club of Washington, various scientific and other societies, and the Bannockburn Golf Club."

WILLIAM HENRY HIDDEN

SON OF WILLIAM HENRY and IRENE SPRAGUE (GOSS) HIDDEN. Was born at Cambridge, May 20, 1863. Entered college in July, 1881, from Cambridge High School.

After graduating went almost immediately to St. Paul, Minnesota, and engaged in business with a large wholesale establishment. In October, 1886, he returned to his home in Cambridge, and represented a western investment concern as its Boston manager. About twenty years of banking in Boston followed, first with the Mattapan Trust Company and later for fifteen years as actuary of the United States Trust Company. "They say that the uneventful lives are always the happy ones, and mine is certainly a happy as well as an uneventful one. The only events of great importance are a visit from a burglar on Christmas Day, 1908, and my resignation from the United States Trust Company on June 1, 1909. Since this date I have been taking a grand rest. Last summer I fished and tramped through the Maine wilderness, and smoothed out some of the wrinkles. This fall I moved into another house in Cambridge, and am now beginning to think I am ready for work again. Just what, I do not yet know, but something will probably turn up when the time comes." Is a member of the Art Club of Boston and the Colonial Club of Cambridge.

WILLIAM HENRY HIDDEN

HENRY THEODORE HILDRETH

HENRY THEODORE HILDRETH

SON of HENRY ORIN and CORNELIA (SHOREY) HILDRETH. Was born at Dedham, February 19, 1863. Entered college in July, 1881, from Roxbury Latin School.

“In September, 1885, I sailed for Europe, where as Parker Fellow of Harvard I spent a year at the American School of Classical Studies at Athens, and two years in the study of Classical Philology at the University of Berlin. While in Berlin I made another short visit to Greece and also one to Italy, besides travel and study in Germany, Belgium, and England. In 1888-90, I was a student of Classical Philology in the Graduate Department of Harvard; in 1889-90 also teaching Greek, Latin, and other subjects in a private school in Boston. In 1890-92 I was professor of Greek in the University of Wooster, Ohio, and in 1892-93 assistant professor of Greek History and Literature in Brown University, and acting head of the department in the absence of the professor-elect in Europe. In 1895 I received the degree of Ph.D. in Classical Philology from Harvard, and became acting professor of Ancient Languages and Literatures in Roanoke College, Virginia, in 1897 professor of the same, and in 1904, following a division of the chair, professor of Greek — my present position. I also give a course on the History and Appreciation of the Fine Arts. In 1899 I was married to Josephine Harmon at Brooklyn, New York.”

JOSEPH ADNA HILL

SON of JOSEPH BANCROFT HILL, A.B., 1821, and HARRIET (BROWN) HILL. Was born at Stewartstown, New Hampshire, May 5, 1860. Entered college in July, 1880, from Phillips Exeter Academy.

“The chronology of my career since graduation is as follows: Taught in the William Penn Charter School at Philadelphia, 1885 to 1886; then entered upon a course of graduate study in economics, government, and public finance, which terminated in the Ph.D. degree received from the University of Halle (Germany) in 1892. I was in Germany about three years altogether prior to taking my degree. Became a lecturer at the University of Pennsylvania in 1893; returned to Harvard, becoming instructor there in 1895; went to Europe ostensibly as the representative of the Massachusetts Tax Commission to investigate European systems of taxation. Wrote a monograph on the English Income Tax. Since 1898 employed in the United States Census Bureau at Washington. The five years that have elapsed since our last previous Class report have brought some advancement in salary, title, and position. I am now one of the five chief statisticians in the Census Bureau." Was orator at the anniversary celebration in Temple, New Hampshire. Is a member of the Cosmos and Harvard Clubs of Washington and of the American Academy of Social and Political Science.

WILLIAM HENRY RAYMOND HILLIARD

SON OF WILLIAM HILLIARD, A.B., 1821, and DELIA (RAYMOND) HILLIARD. Was born at Cleveland, Ohio, December 22, 1859. Entered college in July, 1880, from St. Mark's School.

"Since graduation, with the exception of the last seven or eight summers in Canada, I have been continuously in Pittsburgh, where I have been mostly engaged in the manufacturing business, although my first employment was for eighteen months in a bank. My life has been uneventful." He has been the president of the Alcania Co., makers of tinplate, with works at Avonmore, Pennsylvania, and offices at Pittsburgh, since its organization twelve years ago. He is a member of the Union, Duquesne, University, and other clubs of Pittsburgh.

MARLAND COGSWELL HOBBS

SON OF WILLIAM and MARY MARLAND (COGSWELL) HOBBS. Was born at Roxbury, November 20, 1862. Entered college in July, 1881, from Brookline High School.

"Perhaps among us at college he was most widely known from his early connection with and as the head of the Herald-Crimson, to the interests of which some of his best work outside of regular college duties was devoted. It was the administration of that paper, of which he was the chief, which laid the permanent foundation of the success of Harvard's daily. A member of the Hasty Pudding Club, Institute, O. K., St. Paul's Society, Harvard Union, Athletic, Bicycle, and Lacrosse Associations, in almost all of them he was in demand to hold official positions. In sophomore year he was the orator at the class dinner at the Quincy House, and in senior year was elected one of the photographic committee. Three years at the Law School. He was successively elected to membership in the Thayer, and Pow Wow Law Clubs, was clerk of each in turn, and was later a member of the Langdell Club, and one of the founders of the Harvard Law Review, of which he served as the second president. He won a Bowdoin prize, and other prizes from economic societies. He had also acted at times as correspondent for a number of leading New York and Boston papers. In January, 1888, he was admitted to the Suffolk Bar at Boston, and in March was appointed by Governor Ames to the new clerkship of the Police Court of Brookline. In June of that year he took his LL.B., and began his regular practice of law in Boston, at first on his own account, and later as one of the counsel for the Lamson Consolidated Store Service Co. Early in 1890 he married, at Salem, Elizabeth Frothingham, daughter of the late James O. Safford of that city. His work as counsel for the Lamson Co. was both intricate and arduous, necessitating frequent trips to try and settle suits in different parts of the country. This undoubtedly told upon his physical strength. In May, 1891, a mild case of typhoid fever attacked him, he was not able to overcome it, and he died at his home in Brookline, June 3, 1891."

See Report III., page 32.

HARRY HOLDEN

SON of DANIEL WALKER and ABBY JANE (SMITH) HOLDEN. Was born at Haverhill, August 19, 1863. Entered college in July, 1881, from Haverhill High School.

"Sorry I have nothing to contribute which would be of general interest." He first gained experience with a wholesale drygoods firm in Boston, then by a taste of Nebraska, followed by another engagement in New England. In 1891 he settled in Pittsfield, Massachusetts, where he is now the senior partner of Holden & Stone, owners of a department store. He helped to organize and is now president of the Harvard Club of Berkshire County.

JOHN FRANCIS HOLLAND

Son of MICHAEL and JANE (COLLINS) HOLLAND. Was born at Milford, January 10, 1858. Entered college in July, 1881, from Phillips Exeter Academy.

For two years he was active in private tutoring, and then began his preparation for the law with a special one-year course at the Harvard Law School, which brought him an A.M. In 1888 he was admitted to the Bar in Chicago, and then took eight months of foreign travel as a private tutor. Of his life since he writes: "I have devoted myself assiduously to the practice of law in Chicago since 1889. A year ago I received the nomination for the position of Judge of the Circuit Court of this county at the direct primary of the Republican party and received a very gratifying endorsement from the lawyers, but was not successful at the election. My chief ambition in life now is to see that my son, John F., Jr., who is now fourteen years of age, passes the entrance examinations for Harvard three years from this time and spends four years in Cambridge with credit to himself and his Alma Mater, and returns to Chicago the proud possessor of an A.B." He is a member of the Union League, City and University Clubs of Chicago. At one time he was special assessment attorney for Cook County, and is now Master in Chancery of the Superior Court of that county.

WILLIAM PARMELEE HOMANS

Son of HENRY SMITH and MARGUERITE (PARMELEE) HOMANS. Born in San Francisco, California, April 26, 1862. Entered college in October, 1881, from Adams Academy. Died at Paris, France, May 12, 1910, of tuberculosis.

His father was one of a family which had come to Boston in the early 17th century. His mother's family came from Albany. His father, who had represented the New York Mutual Life Insurance Company in San Francisco, moved to

Paris when William was six years old, and later assumed the management for Europe of another of the American insurance companies. William spent the ten years from 1868 to 1878 abroad, in various schools in France, Germany, and England, entering Adams Academy in the latter year. Upon entering college he immediately took a prominent position in the Class; was first captain of the Class Eleven, a member of the Class Crew, and in his senior year played on the University Eleven. He was a member of the Institute of 1770, Hasty Pudding Club, A. D. Club, Alpha Delta Phi, and of St. Paul's Society. The sad news of his death was cabled while this report was in press, but the following appreciative sketch gives the story of his life since graduation. "You ask me for a word or two about Billy Homans in these latter years. 'T is a pathetic but an inspiring story. We all remember him as he was twenty-five years ago, — his personal charm, his unusual physical strength and beauty, his clear, active, decisive mind, his reserve and poise rather beyond that of most boys of his age. Freer than most of us from the constraints of financial uncertainty, singularly well fitted to make the most of the opportunities which were open to him in the world, the path of life seemed clear. But scarcely had he left college when family sorrows and anxieties clouded the way. Shortly after his graduation he entered upon a year or two of serious chemical study in Bonn. Then came his father's sudden death, followed by cruel financial disappointments and litigation which is not yet ended. He and his brother and sister found themselves left with very limited means instead of an ample fortune. Not long after coming to Baltimore in the early nineties I met Homans there, living quietly with his sister, who was always peculiarly near and dear to him, busily engaged as a chemist in the large works of his brother-in-law. But his brother-in-law failed in business, became ill, and moved to New York, where he soon died. Homans was left without income, to support and care for his sister and three little children. From that day to the hour of his death this was the one object of his life. One day in 1897, several years after he had left Baltimore, I looked him up in New York and we dined together. Working all day in his office and giving his evenings to the teaching of the children, he had known not a moment of relaxation. His sister had for some years been seriously ill; his only brother had died; care, anxiety, and work had told on him sadly. He looked worn and tired. And so the years passed on, — years of faithful and unswerving devotion. The only object in his life was the care of his sister and her children. To them he gave every effort, every thought, every energy. But with each year came new trials, — the continued ill health of his sister, the serious illness of one after another of the children, involving grave surgical operations, with all the attendant anxiety and financial burden. And during much of this time he had been suffering from a chronic malady, the onset of which dated from his college days, — a malady which slowly but surely sapped the sources of an exceptionally fine physical frame. Now and again during these years, only occasionally, I saw him growing thinner and paler and more nervous, — now hopeful over some plan which seemed to be of promise, now disillusionized by its failure, and anxious as to the health of his sister and the future of her children. None of his material hopes were realized, and, to fill his cup of bitterness, the fire in Baltimore destroyed all his sister's household effects, which had been stored there ten years before waiting for better days. And then, as if this were not enough, the panic of 1907 put an end to the most hopeful of his financial schemes. But still he kept on working courageously, uncomplainingly, without thought of self, without vacation or relaxation. Meanwhile the children grew and flourished, and his nephew passed successfully through a polytechnic school and started earnestly on his life's work, ready to share with his uncle the responsibility and care for his mother and sisters. The time seemed near when some of the burden of care and anxiety which Homans had borne for so many years might be lifted, to some extent at least, from his shoulders. In June, 1908, I passed through New York on my way to Canada. It had been some years since I had seen Billy and I looked him up at his office. I shall never forget that which greeted me. The thin, drawn, wrinkled face, the hacking cough, the husky voice — the whole picture told the story all too clearly. After dinner he let me look him over. It was already well advanced. Only then did he tell me the story of the illness that had dragged him down and caused him so many hours of miserable suffering which he had borne patiently all these years because he did not feel justified in spending on himself that which would have enabled him to take the step which might, and probably would, have saved all. I told him what he must do, and, proud as he was, he did it without a murmur. The rest of the story is short. At the sanitarium I had warned them that they would probably find him nervous and difficult — and when he left, a year ago last spring, so much improved that he looked like his old self, the physicians told me that he was the best patient they had had. He had never uttered a complaint nor made an objection. How hard that must have been for him anyone who knew him well must realize! In May, a year ago, he started on a long sea trip, at the end of which he was to join his friend and employer for some months in Europe. On his way his fever returned, and though he improved greatly in the late summer and fall, he was much depressed during the winter by the reports of a new and grave illness which had befallen his sister, leaving her almost blind. His letters in the early spring filled us with anxiety. Finally, after his return to Paris, about a month and a half ago, word came from Crosby Whitman, who was caring for him, which confirmed our worst fears. We had written urging him to come home when a telegram came announcing his critical illness; two days later, on May 12, a second message told of his death. Every physician meets, now and then, with examples of inspiring devotion and self-sacrifice of which the world never knows; it is these experiences which elevate the doctor's life. Such was Homans' career — a record of pure single-hearted, unselfish self-abnegation and devotion, the noblest that I have ever seen. As ill-fitted as one could well imagine by his early training to meet the unending trials with which his life was beset, he showed a courage, simple, silent, persistent, heroic in the truest sense of the word. His life was a tragedy, but a tragedy full of beautiful and uplifting inspiration!"

EDWIN HOWARD

SON OF LEVI and LYDIA JANE (HAPGOOD) HOWARD. Was born at Chelmsford, May 18, 1861. Entered college in July, 1881, from Boston Latin School.

"Since graduation I have spent three years in concert singing and study in Boston, seven years on the dramatic stage in Julia Marlowe's Co. (acting also as music director of that company and arranging the incidental music for the repertory), one season with Viola Allen, one season with Marie Wainwright, one season in stock at the Grand Opera House, New Orleans, three years in study in Paris, one year in London, one year as leading tenor with the Standard Opera Co. of Chicago (presenting 'Martha' and 'The Bohemian Girl,' my wife being leading contralto of the company), three years conducting choral societies and church choirs in Wausau, Wisconsin, giving recitals and teaching voice and elocution there, also giving series of lectures on music. On February 7, this year, my wife and I took the voice and opera department of a school of music at Denver, Colorado, founded by former deans of the School of Music of Denver University, this school being now named 'The Howard-Schweikher School of Music.'" Is or was a member of The Players' Club of New York.

SHAFTER HOWARD

SON OF CHARLES WEBB and EMMA LOVELL (SHAFTER) HOWARD. Was born at San Francisco, California, February 2, 1863. Entered college in July, 1881, from Adams Academy.

Shafter Howard has divided his residence between Oakland, California, New York City, and Boston. He has essayed several lines of business but has had more real interest in music than in business. He has composed a number of musical productions, of which the most important was a light opera, "His Majesty," which had a moderate run in New York. The overture was played at the graduates' night Pop Concert in 1905, with Howard leading. His latest report mentions a connection with the New York architects,

ALFRED WILLIAM HOYT

SON of ALFRED MILLER and ROSINA ELIZABETH (REESE) HOYT. Was born at New York City, January 22, 1863. Entered college in October, 1881, under the tutorship of Arthur H. Cutler and Thomas S. Bettens.

Spent one year in Michigan and then returned to New York. The banking firm of which he is a member is A. M. Hoyt & Co. He has spent some time abroad and in travel.

JOHN LA MONTE HURST

SON of JOHN FLETCHER and CATHERINE ELIZABETH (LAMONTE) HURST. Was born at Passaic, New Jersey, May 14, 1860. Entered college in October, 1884, as a senior, from Wesleyan University.

"My life since graduating from Harvard has not been eventful. At the same time it has been, considering the circumstances, in the main satisfactory to myself, and has afforded me plenty of variety. In the first year, after graduation, I entered the employ of Messrs. Harper & Brothers, but owing to the asthma, to which I have been subject all my life, I left New York and went to Colorado, where I did newspaper work on the Denver dailies. Then I went to Kansas City, where I conducted a weekly newspaper of my own. Returning to Denver, I went into the Real Estate Loan and Insurance business until 1893, when I made a trip to Europe, travelling through some of the principal countries. Stopping in Rome, I accepted a position in the American Consulate-General until I received a really fine offer to go to Buenos Ayres as an agent of the United States Leather Co., which was shipping most of its hides from South America. I went to Buenos Ayres, but gave up my place after a few months' trial, as I found the climate unsuitable for my trouble. Returning, our boat touched leisurely at interesting ports like Montevideo and Rio Janeiro, where, at the latter, I believe (incidentally), I had one of the finest views in the world. I now went back to Rome, where I was offered and accepted the position of treasurer in the Methodist Episcopal Mission in Italy, which church annually expends more than $50,000 in Italy, with its imposing educational building in Rome. While living in the Eternal City I did considerable writing for certain American papers, including the New York Times, Boston Transcript, The Independent, Critic, Chautauquan, etc. During the winter of 1899-1900 I made a trip to Egypt and the Holy Land as far as Damascus. In 1900 I returned once more to Colorado. In Denver I accepted a position with the Post Office, with which I stayed for about five years. Always having a predilection for teaching, owing, I must say, to the intellectual nature of its habits, in the next place I entered the Colorado State Normal School at Greeley, where I received the degree of Master of Pedagogy, and a certificate entitling me to teach in the public schools of Colorado for life. Since then I have travelled much in Europe, Asia, and America. I am now taking a post-graduate course in the Württemberger University of Tübingen, where Melanchthon and the poet Uhland were once professors. I am specializing in German Literature, and if I can stand the climate (for it is not Colorado), I shall make an effort to get the doctor's degree. I have never married. I have belonged to no organizations excepting the Denver Athletic Club, the University Club, and various political clubs, but hold no relation to any now excepting the Rocky Mountain Harvard Club, of which I have been an enthusiastic member for twenty-four years." Has just returned to Denver, May, 1910.

CYRUS WENDELL IRISH

SON OF CYRUS and CATHERINE (DAVIS) IRISH. Was born at Buckfield, Maine, August 27, 1862. Entered college in July, 1881, from Lowell High School.

He began by teaching science at the Lowell High School. In 1897 he was elected head-master and continues to honor that position. He has published a text-book for secondary-school use on qualitative analysis.

LOUIS LINCOLN JACKSON

Son of SAMUEL and MARY WRIGHT (FIELD) JACKSON. Was born at Brighton, March 12, 1861. Entered college in July, 1881, from Boston Latin School.

"I spent the first four years after graduation as assistant in the Harvard Chemical Laboratory, and the following two years in Germany as a Parker Fellow. In 1891 I took a job as chemist in the Acetic Acid Works of E. R. Squibb & Sons, and except for four years which I spent in St. Louis as chemist in the Mallinckrodt Chemical Works, I have been with the Squibbs ever since; the last eight years as superintendent of their Drug and Chemical Factory." He received the degrees of A.M. and Ph.D. at Harvard in 1888.

ARTHUR STODDARD JOHNSON

Son of SAMUEL and MARY (STODDARD) JOHNSON. Was born at Boston, June 4, 1863. Entered college in July, 1881, from G. W. C. Noble's Private School.

"For several years after graduation I was obliged to take life quietly on account of illness. I travelled quite extensively till 1891, when with regained health I settled down and took up the care of several trust estates and interested myself in church and philanthropic work. The broad field of influence of the Young Men's Christian Association appealed to me and to this organization I have devoted much time, having for the past fourteen years held the office of President of the Boston Association, with a yearly enrolment of over eight thousand men." This gives but little indication of Johnson's extensive work in philanthropy and public service. He has done much for Harvard, as the graduate member of the board of directors of the Harvard Coöperative Society, as treasurer of the Harvard Mission, and chairman of the Graduate Advisory Committee of the Harvard University Christian Association. He is also secretary of the New England Home for Little Wanderers, vice-president of the City Missionary Society, and on the boards of other societies. In 1909 he was the head of the movement which raised half a million dollars to erect a new building for the Boston Young Men's Christian Association, of which he was the treasurer before he became its president.

HENRY WALTER JONES

SON of HENRY ELIJAH and SUSAN AUGUSTA (MORRISON) JONES. Was born at Cambridge, November 2, 1860. Entered college in June, 1879. Joined our Class as a junior, from the Class of '84.

"In January, 1886, I began business with the old firm of C. L. Jones & Co., Soap Manufacturers, — a business which had been in our family since about 1840. After a few months with them my health gave out and I was unable to do any active work for some time. I still retained an indirect interest in the business till January, 1902, when through mismanagement of one of the partners the firm was obliged to go out of business. For nearly a year after that I was actively engaged in helping the receiver wind up the business. I then spent six or eight months in New York with the bond house of Rhoades and Richmond, with the idea of representing them in Boston later. Unfortunately the bond market took an unfortunate 'tumble' at that time and they were obliged to postpone their venture. In February, 1905, my father died. At that time I was with the Boston Incandescent Lamp Co. but was obliged to leave them through another breakdown, which kept me out of business for several years. In the fall of 1907 I joined forces with the Harvard Alumni Association as one of the staff of the Harvard Bulletin, where I have been more or less of the time ever since. In the summer of 1909 my mother died, and I am for the present at least with my sister at 285 Harvard St., Cambridge."

EDWARD KIRK KEEP

SON of CHAUNCEY and MARY ISABELLA (CENTER) KEEP. Was born at Lockport, New York, November 28, 1861. Entered college in July, 1880. Joined our Class as a junior, from the Class of '84.

"Between 1885 and 1890 I studied law in Buffalo, was admitted to the Bar and practised law here. Between 1890 and 1910 I lived most of the time in Europe, although I always looked upon Buffalo as my home. During this latter period I lived much in various parts of Europe, chiefly in England, Italy, Germany, and France. London was my headquarters while abroad. Most of my time for the last twenty years has been given to travelling and study. My studies have been largely of a mystical and metaphysical character."

ARTHUR KEITH

SON of HARRISON ALONZO and MARY ELIZABETH (RICHARDSON) KEITH. Was born at St. Louis, Missouri, September 30, 1864. Entered college in July, 1881, from Adams Academy.

"In doubt as to the selection of a career, I consulted Professor Shaler after graduation. By his advice I determined to take up geology, and to that end I spent the next year in the Lawrence Scientific School, and the year after in the Harvard Graduate Department. My studies were in geological and allied subjects, and earned me the degree of A.M. My first summer after graduation was spent in tramping over Quincy and surrounding towns in a geological survey of them. The summer of 1886 and part of the following winter were devoted to the Massachusetts Topographical Survey. In June, 1887, I went to Tennessee as an assistant on a field party of the United States Geological Survey. The arduous labor there was easily accomplished, after the training in football and crew work at Harvard. In the fall I made my first acquaintance with Washington and the official life of the Government. It exercised for me the attraction that it usually has for young men, and I have always been grateful to Shaler for turning my boyhood's liking for science into an active force to control my life. The twenty-three years since I entered the Survey have been active. The summers have been my season for geological work, and each has seen me in the field for four or five months. Facts recorded in the field have been studied in the office at Washington, and maps and reports have been worked up out of the raw material of notes. For years my work lay in the Appalachians from New Jersey to Alabama, one of the most difficult fields in the world. In 1906, in recognition of successful results there, I was put in charge of the geological mapping of the survey over the entire United States. This broadening of field has taken me into most of the states and put me in touch with problems of science and men that are of absorbing interest. The stimulus of these and the contact of diverse interests is one of the most valuable features of scientific life at the Capital. Each year I have spent some vacation in New England and have pursued my avocation, yachting, under a handicap. Racing of small yachts has been a keen pleasure to me, and several of my own design have been quite successful. Exercise in walking, golf, and some more youthful tennis have kept me in physical trim, and the principles learned in college training have helped me to withstand the exactions of my profession."

DANIEL KELLEHER

SON OF DANIEL and MARY (MURPHY) KELLEHER. Was born at Middleboro, February 5, 1864. Entered college in July, 1881, from Bridgewater High School.

"From 1885 to 1890 I lived in Syracuse, New York, doing private tutoring and studying law. In 1890 I came to Seattle, Washington, and have since that time been in active practice of law. Of late years, though confining myself mostly to the practice of law in the firm of Bausman & Kelleher, I have branched out a little in business and am president of the Bank for Savings in Seattle, and a director, as well as being on the Executive Committee, of The Seattle National Bank, the State Bank of Seattle, the Bank for Savings in Seattle, and the First National Bank of Bremerton. I am also interested in the lumber business, being president of the Riverside Timber Co., which is a large holder of timber lands in the State of Washington. I have a very good clientage in the law. Last year I was able to buy back 'Mt. Airy,' a very fine estate of twenty-two hundred acres in the 'Valley' of Virginia, which formerly belonged to Mrs. Kelleher's grandfather. I visited there last fall. The place is in a high state of cultivation and I look forward to spending a little time there every year. I am firmly wedded, however, to Seattle and expect to make it my permanent home. It is a thriving city and has a great future before it. I have taken an active part in the consolidation of two of the largest banks in Seattle, the Puget Sound National and The Seattle National Bank. The two banks are being merged at the present time into one bank under the name of The Seattle National Bank. It will have aggregate deposits of nineteen million dollars and will be by far the largest bank in the Pacific Northwest." He was one of the founders of the Harvard Club of Seattle nearly twenty years ago, and has been secretary and president of it. In 1905 he was chosen toastmaster at the dinner given by all the Harvard men of the Northwest to Samuel Hill, overseer. He is also a member of the University, Rainier, Country, and other clubs of Seattle.

MAXIMILIAN LINDSAY KELLNER

SON OF CHARLES FREDERICK and ROSE THERESA (MARY) KELLNER. Was born at Detroit, Michigan, May 21, 1861. Entered college in October, 1884, as a senior, from Hobart College.

The year after graduation he spent in the graduate school, studying Semitic, and was given an A.M. At the same time he was in college he was completing his theological education at the Episcopal Theological School at Cambridge, which gave him the degree of S.T.B. in 1885. He began his teaching in that institution in 1886, first as an instructor, then as an assistant professor, and for the last ten years as a full professor. "The life of a teacher in a theological school is necessarily both busy and interesting, but there is little to break its evenness. An occasional course of lectures given in Boston during the winter or at a summer school in Cambridge or elsewhere, however, brings one into closer touch with the larger world and its abiding interest in the things which make for righteousness in the world. Attendance as a delegate at the Pan-Anglican Church Congress in London and as chaplain to the Bishop of Massachusetts, William Lawrence, '71, was a pleasant feature of the summer of 1907. Upon the retirement of Professor P. H. Steenstra from the chair of the Literature and Interpretation of the Old Testament in June, 1907, I was transferred from the professorship of Old Testament Languages to that position. To be associated in teaching, as I am, with so many Harvard men, is one of the greatest pleasures of my position. On our own faculty there are Nash '78, Drown '84, and Rhineland and Washburn '91." In 1895 Hobart conferred upon him the honorary degree of S.T.D. He has done considerable writing and preaching in addition to his professorial duties. He is a member of the Clericus and Harvard Biblical Clubs, of the American Oriental Society, and the American Society of Biblical Literature and Exegesis.

CHARLES CARROLL KING

SON OF CLARK and RHODA ROXANA (DODGE) KING. Was born at East Montpelier, Vermont, January 13, 1863. Entered college in July, 1881, from Montpelier High School.

"Immediately after graduation I attended the Harvard Law School three years, graduating in 1888, having been Harvard correspondent during my Law School attendance for the New York Tribune and New York World. In the autumn of 1888 I served Governor W. P. Dillingham (now U. S. Senator) of Vermont as executive clerk until admitted to the Suffolk Bar. On admission to practice, I settled in Brockton, Massachusetts, and have practised here ever since. Was member of the Common Council for two years, in one of which I was a member of the Charter Revision Committee on the part of the Council; became Alderman in 1901, was candidate for the General Court in 1902, but was defeated by twenty-six votes after a hard fight, the previous year's majority having been cut down by me by two hundred votes. Went into a law partnership in 1906 with Richard W. Nutter (Harvard 1891), a cousin of our George R. Nutter, and have been in this partnership ever since. Was married in 1899, and we have a daughter, born in 1905. Became a Special Justice of the judicial district covering Brockton and the three Bridgewater in 1906, the Court being called the Police Court of Brockton. Warren A. Reed, a Harvard man, is the Chief Justice. Play golf as a hobby, and to preserve my youth."

LOUIS KRUMBHAAR

Son of GEORGE DOUGLAS and SUSAN MARGARET (COOPER) KRUMBHAAR. Was born at Paris, France, October 5, 1861. Entered college in July, 1881, under the tutorage of W. H. Rhett.

"On leaving college I returned to Philadelphia and, because of serious trouble with my eyes, was not able to undertake work of any kind for a year and a half. I then obtained a position with a Trust Company in Philadelphia, where I remained for several years. For a short time I was employed by the Baltimore & Ohio R.R., and then was made secretary and vice-president of the Florida Sugar Mfg. Co. I spent a year in Florida on this sugar plantation. I was married in 1892 and lived in Philadelphia until 1896. After a severe illness I came to Syracuse in 1898 and obtained the position with the Solvay Process Company which I now hold. Since then my life has flowed along very smoothly and quietly. The Solvay Process Company does a great deal of 'welfare' work, so called, for the betterment of their employees, and in addition to my regular duties I am very much interested in these matters. My pet hobby, however, is the George Junior Republic, of which I have had the privilege of being a trustee, and for a time a member of the executive committee. I am also much interested in the work that the Harvard Club of Syracuse has undertaken, which is for civic betterment. The Club is successfully demonstrating that Harvard men stand for all that is best in the communities in which they live, and have really been instrumental in accomplishing a great deal of good in Syracuse, and the work is still going on with vigor. I am also a trustee of St. John's school, Manlius, New York. This school is one of the half-dozen schools from which the head boy is commissioned in the regular army without further examination."

RALPH MARTIN LANE

SON of FRANK ADAMS and EMMA HORNER (PRICE) LANE. Was born at St. Louis, Missouri, August 23, 1863. Entered college in July, 1881, from Phillips Exeter Academy.

Lane married shortly after graduation. As his eyes forbade the study of law which he wished to pursue, he spent the first three years abroad or in St. Louis, and then made his definite choice of an occupation. He became the secretary and treasurer of the Whitman Agricultural Company of St. Louis. This position he held till his death. His family responsibilities, the requirements of his business, and his sense of duty to it kept him constantly at work and urged him to over-exertion. This brought on recurrent attacks of appendicitis, which undermined his strength, so that when the necessity came for an operation he failed to rally after it had been performed. He died at St. Louis, September 11, 1893. Lane had all the generosity and warmth of the South combined with the energy and enthusiasm of the West, while his years of residence and education in the East and in Europe gave his mind balance, breadth, and maturity. He was one of the board of governors and a house officer of the University Club of St. Louis, and with other Harvard men did much to bring to that organization its present standard and reputation. Those of his classmates who, after graduation, were fortunate enough to meet him in St. Louis, remember the heartiness of his welcome, and the generosity of his hospitality. Nothing was too good for a member of the class of 1885. His son, Ralph Martin Lane, Jr., is a member of 1910.

See Report IV., page 33.

SON of CHARLES ROLLIN and MARY ANN (WOOD) LARRABEE. Was born at Chicago, Illinois, February 15, 1863.

JOHN LAWRENCE

EUGENE LENT

Entered college in July, 1881, from C. N. Fessenden's Boys' Higher School.

During the three years that he spent at Harvard he passed creditably all his examinations, receiving in June, 1883, at the end of his sophomore year, highest honors in classics. Larrabee passed quietly through his Cambridge life, fulfilling honorably all the duties imposed upon him, and making life-long friends. In the autumn of 1884 his health broke down, and he was obliged to leave college. The doctors recommended an outdoor life, and he soon started for the West, first spending a number of months on a ranch in Kansas, and later in northern Texas, where he lived over three years. In 1889 he was enabled to return to Chicago and enter the employ of the Western Electric Company, where he remained for ten years, perfecting himself in the many requirements of the position, and taking charge of electric plants in many cities and towns. By reading and study he was enabled to accomplish the wish that lay next his heart. It had always been his earnest desire to complete his college course and receive his degree, and it shows his warm and loyal affection for Harvard that in the midst of his all-engrossing work he should make time to carry on, unaided, his senior studies and successfully pass the examinations in 1891, receiving thereby his A.B. In July, 1899, his health again broke down and he was obliged to give up his business and seek a warmer climate. At San Antonio and at Waring, a few miles distant, he and his family stayed for nearly three years. He made a brave fight, and at one time great hopes of a permanent recovery were entertained by the doctors. But it was not to be, and the end came peacefully at his Chicago home, October 2, 1902.

See Report VI., page 61.

JOHN LAWRENCE

SON OF ABBOTT LAWRENCE, 1849; A.M., 1853; LL.B., 1853, and HARRIETTE WHITE (PAIGE) LAWRENCE. Was born at Boston, April 27, 1861. Entered college in July, 1881, under the tutorship of Charles Almy, Jr.

“ My life has been uneventful. After graduating, I went around the world, then studied law for two years at the Harvard Law School. This work I was forced to give up on account of my eyes, and as a result bought a farm and settled in Groton, Massachusetts, where my ancestors were among the early settlers. I served as selectman, assessor, and overseer of the poor of the town for three years; also for three years on the School Committee. For five years I was a member of the Massachusetts Volunteer Militia, and during the war with Spain held a commission as ensign in the United States Navy. I am a director in several companies and manager on two hospital boards. My time is spent between Groton, Nahant, Boston, and Europe.”

EUGENE LENT

SON OF WILLIAM MANDEVILLE and FRANCES (LAFORGE) LENT. Was born at San Francisco, California, September 12, 1863. Entered college in July, 1881, from Adams Academy.

“ On graduation B. B. Thayer, '85, Follansbee, '85, W. R. Hearst, '86, and I went to the Black Hills, Dakota. The winter of 1885 I passed in California, engaged in mining. I spent the year 1886 and part of 1887 between Leadville and Denver, Colorado, and New York City. In the fall of 1887 E. L. Thayer, '85, F. H. Briggs, '85, and I were on the staff of the San Francisco Examiner. I was mining on the Isthmus of Panama in 1888-89, and the years 1890 and 1891 were passed in mining in Colorado, with headquarters in Denver. I came to San Francisco in 1892, entered the University of California, and was graduated from the Hastings College of law in 1895. I then formed a law partnership with William F. Humphrey, with offices in the Crocker Building, San Francisco, where we remained until April 18, 1906, when circumstances beyond the control of either of us compelled the suspension of business. The firm resumed the practice of law April 27, 1906, and since February, 1907, has been in the Mills Building, where we hope to remain indefinitely or until circumstances beyond our control happen again.”

WILLIAM LEVERETT

SON OF WILLIAM COLE LEVERETT, A.B., 1852; A.M., and CORNELIA TATE (INGRAHAM) LEVERETT. Was born at Newport, Rhode Island, March 3, 1863. Entered college in July, 1881, from Dickinson College.

"Immediately upon graduation in 1885 I went to California, where I engaged in teaching at Prof. William Reid's Private School for Boys, Belmont, California, remaining for two years, until June, 1887. Then returned to the East, and for one year taught in a fitting school for West Point, conducted by Colonel Huse at Highland Falls, New York. Studied law in Bloomsburg, Pennsylvania, and was duly admitted to practice in Columbia and Lackawanna Counties, locating at Scranton, where I remained from December, 1889, to September, 1892. On October 5, 1892, I was married to Miss Elisabeth Willits McKely of Bloomsburg. Lived at Wilkes Barre from October, 1892, until April, 1895, when I removed to Philadelphia and entered the employ of R. G. Dun & Co., in their Philadelphia office, where I have since remained, and, as stated in Class Report No. 6, am still 'pursuing uneventfully a busy life.'"

LAWRENCE LITCHFIELD

SON of ALLYNE CUSHING and SUSAN CORNELIA (CARVER) LITCHFIELD. Was born at Grand Rapids, Michigan, November 8, 1861. Entered college in July, 1881, from Boston Latin School.

"The most important events in my life since graduation — my marriage and the births of my children — have been chronicled in previous reports. For the rest, I furnish a brilliant example of how a man can keep infernally busy for twenty-five years without doing anything. I have been to the Pacific Coast, have loafed a little in Mexico, Florida, Northern Ontario, British Columbia, and Alaska, and have studied a little in Paris, Vienna, and Berlin. I was a charter member of the Harvard Club of Western Pennsylvania and its third president. With the flowing years I have tried to narrow, and proportionately deepen, the field of my medical endeavors, until now I can confine myself strictly to internal medicine. To my great regret I have forgotten entirely my Greek and Latin, but I have acquired a practical knowledge of German, French, and Italian. I have not yet learned to read our daily papers, but I am still studying medicine, and occasionally find a little time for one of the great masters of fiction. I am on the medical staffs of four hospitals, and have been president of each of the three medical societies here in Pittsburg. I am actively interested in the crusades against tuberculosis and venereal diseases, and I had the honor of being a member of the Executive Committee of the Sixth International Congress on Tuberculosis, and chairman of the Entertainment Committee for the same. I am fond of nature, music, and my friends, and am always particularly refreshed and delighted when an '85 man finds his way to our home." He is a member of the Union Club of Pittsburg, and of the American Society for the Advancement of Science.

LAWRENCE LITCHFIELD

JOSEPH MANSFIELD LONG

SON OF JONATHAN DEAN and MARY HOWITT (MORGAN) LONG. Was born at Brookline, November 21, 1862. Entered college in July, 1881, from Brookline High School.

“After the regular course of three years at Newton Theological Institution, following graduation from college, I became pastor of the Baptist Church at Canton, Maine, in June, 1888, and married in October of the same year. A pastorate of over three years followed in that beautiful part of western Maine, among the foothills of the White Mountains. This was succeeded by my longest pastorate, six years, at Winthrop, near the capital of the State, and in September, 1897, I removed to Harrington, on the extreme eastern coast, to become pastor of a similar church there. Life was quiet, but busy and most enjoyable in these three country pastorates. I did much of my pastoral calling by bicycle, in this way covering two large townships in one pastorate, yet found considerable time for reading and study, especially during the long winter storms. My chief outdoor recreation was, as it still is, gardening, and in horticultural exhibitions a number of blue ribbons have come my way, and sometimes I have acted as judge. In the summer of 1901 I accepted a call to the First Baptist Church, Dorchester District, Boston. Beside church duties I assisted Dr. S. S. Curry of the School of Expression in the preparation of several volumes for the press, doing considerable literary work in this way. Here my wife lost her health, which has not been recovered, and I felt obliged to withdraw from the active pastorate on that account, accepting an appointment with the United States Civil Service Commission at Washington as stenographer and correspondence clerk, the result of competitive examination. I still continue to preach from time to time, and opportunities to reënter the pastorate have come, but could not be accepted. My official business is to handle part of the correspondence with individuals already in the government service, serving as a kind of ‘trouble clerk’ for over a hundred thousand persons. The funny letters, and the pathetic ones, keep these duties from becoming a bore, and I consider myself more fortunate than most government employees in having work full of human interest. My indoor recreation is music, Professor Paine's instructions having resulted in a considerable amount of musical composition, some of which has reached the public ear in a small way. I am a member of the Washington Choral Society and the Harvard Club. We have just founded a scholarship for Washington boys entering Harvard, and have placed handsome engravings representing the college on the walls of all the high schools of the city. A few little things of mine have appeared in Success and The Youths' Companion, and I act as Washington correspondent for a weekly journal. On the cars the last two years I have gone on with French and German and acquired some reading knowledge of Spanish, Italian, and Esperanto. My oldest son — six-feet-two and a good football player — hopes to enter Harvard in a year or two. Altogether, although I have had to relinquish largely the career I had hoped to follow, life is as interesting and enjoyable as I could ask, not the least of its pleasures being to watch the development of my six boys and girls, who are descendants, through their mother, of John Alden and Jonathan Edwards."

DANIEL WILLIAM LOTHMAN

SON OF ERNST HENRY and CLARA ELIZABETH (BUCHER) LOTHMAN. Was born at Cleveland, Ohio, January 24, 1861. Entered college in October, 1881, from Cleveland Central High School.

After graduation returned to Cleveland and became a teacher in the Central High School, where he had prepared for college. Taught Latin and Greek there until 1900, when he was promoted to the assistant principalship of the East High School of Cleveland. Has published "Lothman's Latin Lessons," 1908. Is a member of the University Club of Cleveland.

college in July, 1881, from Chicago High School, and from Joshua Kendall's Private School.

“On Commencement Day I was informed by President Eliot that my standing in the courses in history, Roman law, etc., which I had taken, entitled me to the honorary fellowship in L'Ecole des Sciences Politiques in Paris, then, if not now, the leading school for the study of International Law and Diplomacy. I sprung this on father, who was present at my graduation, and a few days afterwards five '85 men — Fred Carpenter, Ed Sanford, Otto Hansen, Steve Bartlett, and I — found ourselves aboard a Cunarder for Europe. Ed Sanford and I gave especial attention to L'Ecole des Sciences Politiques, where Leon Say, Leroy-Beaulieu, and other distinguished statesmen of France were lecturing. We travelled as opportunity offered, and in the following summer Stephen Bartlett and I plunged off into eastern Russia, then up to Finland, Norway, and Sweden. I came back in September, 1886, and went to the Harvard Law School. In the spring of 1888, my second year in Law School, my brother and I went abroad on account of his health — I building better than I knew. For on that trip I met Miss Arnoux, and instead of getting back in three weeks, I got back in six months, and was married twelve months later. The next fall I resumed work at the law school, Mrs. MacArthur attending Radcliffe. In midwinter, however, I was taken seriously ill with the then newly imported grip. I left Cambridge, and when able to work again, I entered a law office in New York. I was then twenty-seven. Not long after I was admitted to the New York Bar, and forsaking the parental path, I practised in New York in a very active firm for seven years, — in the office of Arnoux, Rich and Woodford. In 1897 General Woodford was appointed Minister to Spain. He asked President McKinley for my appointment as a special secretary of legation, and I went to Spain. He had a more difficult task before him than has commonly been understood, — to maintain friendship with Spain (whose friendship the United States had long enjoyed and wished to preserve), and at the same time, to ask and expect her to do certain things which the United States deemed essential, but which Spain, with her traditions, would necessarily be slow in yielding. From the point of view of one who saw the inside, and knew the facts, Woodford was accomplishing with dispatch what he was sent to do, when an impatient congress, an impatient yellow journalism, and an impatient public, forced McKinley, against his will and judgment, to deliver an ultimatum to Spain, and bring on war. Woodford was carrying out and accomplishing McKinley's purpose, — the obtaining of home rule, and a representative form of government for Cuba under the sovereignty and protection of Spain. The negotiations had reached an advanced and promising stage; I had come to Washington from Madrid to confer upon the situation with the President and Secretary of State; I landed in New York and hurried to Washington on the day when a certain New York yellow sheet came out with screeching head-lines, calling for the impeachment of McKinley because he did not declare war. After laying before the President and Secretary Day the full situation in Spain more completely than could be done by cable or dispatch, I was told by the President that as public feeling was so intense he doubted whether a declaration of war could be much longer delayed. The Maine had been blown up, and there were other aggravating circumstances. He requested me to remain in Washington (though I had left my family in Madrid), and two days later he asked me to accept assignment in assisting Secretary Day and Secretary Adee in the rapidly increasing diplomatic work of the State Department, occasioned by the shadow of oncoming war. The ultimatum to Spain was delivered. The war was on. McKinley had been slow to declare it, but once in, he spared no effort. I remained in the State Department during the war, — six months of vivid experience. Three nights a week I slept in the department, alternating with Mr. Adee, on hand to receive cipher cables which were constantly pouring in from our diplomatic representatives in various parts of the world. In August, 1898, when the protocol of peace was signed, John Bassett Moore was appointed Secretary and Counsel to the Commission, and I tagged on as his assistant. After the Treaty of Peace was signed, December 10, 1898, the Commissioners returned home. I remained in Paris with certain work to do in closing up the affairs. Near the end of January, 1899, I received a cable from Secretary Hay, saying the President desired to know if I would go to Manila. He wished to appoint me Secretary and Counsel of the Philippine Commission. We were expected to remain there about two months. I went, and I remained ten long months, returning via San Francisco. On returning I was in Washington for several months, where our Commission (Shurman, Dewey, and Worcester) prepared a considerable report, in four volumes, of its work and findings. As this work drew to a finish, President McKinley asked me if I wished to continue in diplomatic service, and I discussed the matter with him. He was prepared to offer me a certain ministry in South America. My father and brother, however, laid hold of me and claimed me for their business. My two uncles had recently died, leaving them in need of more of the family blood. I joined the ranks, and for the last ten years have been keeping step, or marking time, or been mostly on the run. For the last ten years I have been an officer and director of MacArthur Brothers Co., and we have been building things more or less as usual, like our sires and grandsires, only more so, — railroads, tunnels, dams, reservoirs, canals, locks, etc. Law helps me in, the family blood helps me through, diplomacy (sometimes) helps me out. Of works of some importance in the last ten years may be mentioned major parts of the Tidewater Railway system, of the Chicago, Cincinnati & Ohio system, of the Western Maryland system, with other contracts on the Union Pacific, the Illinois Central, the Burlington, the New York Central, the Baltimore & Ohio, etc.; the Wachusett Dam at Clinton, Massachusetts, for the Metropolitan Water Board of Boston, the Katonah Dam for the city of New York, the Sault Ste. Marie Canal for the United States Government, Ship lock for the United States Government in the Niagara River, the Ashokan Dams and Reservoirs for New York. In 1907 we formed a group of four of the leading contracting concerns of the country, together with two important banking-houses, and under the name of the Mac-Arthur-Gillespie Co. we submitted to the United States Government a bid for the building of the Panama Canal. The bid was carefully considered by the Government for some weeks, with the result, however, that the Government concluded to continue the work under its own corps of engineers. A few years ago we made our New York office our main office, instead of Chicago; and when not somewhere else, I am in New York, which I have made my home for twenty years, — when not away.”

ROBERT LATIMER McCOOK

SON OF GEORGE WYTHE and MARGARET (DICK) McCOOK. Was born at Steubenville, Ohio, September 15, 1862. Entered college in July, 1881, from St. Paul's School.

He studied law in New York at the Columbia Law School and received his LL.B. in 1887, and then was in the office of Alexander & Green. For a short time he was in business in Chicago and then returned to New York, where his office remained until recently at 120 Broadway. He is now in California.

WILLIAM MORROW McINNES

SON OF JOHN and ELIZABETH JANE (MORROW) McINNES. Was born at Washington, Pennsylvania, September 8, 1864. Entered college in July, 1881, from Roxbury Latin School.

“ In September, 1885, I entered the Harvard Law School, from which I graduated in June, 1888, having been admitted to the Suffolk Bar in January of that same year. After a short vacation on the Island of Nantucket, Massachusetts, in August I entered the law office of Myers & Warner, Boston, as a law student, remaining with that firm as a student and clerk for nearly three years. In May, 1891, I became associated in business with my classmate, Arthur L. Allen, with law offices in the Exchange Building, Boston; and after his death, in 1892, I continued for six years in the same offices, until January 1, 1898, when I accepted the position of assistant bursar of Harvard University, with my office in Cambridge. I continue to hold that office, and am also treasurer of the Harvard Coöperative Society. For many years after graduation I retained my residence in Roxbury, Massachusetts, but in 1901 I moved to Hotel Wadsworth, Boston, where I now reside. My political ambitions were satisfied with one year in the Boston Common Council in 1894, although I served for several years on the Republican City Committee. Religious matters have also claimed my attention to a slight degree, and I have been active in religious organizations, being secretary of the Channing Club of Boston for several years. My love of nature and of the woods and hills led me to join the Appalachian Mountain Club, and I have spent several of my too short vacations seeing New England from a bicycle, and climbing many of the mountains of New England and of the Adirondacks. My life for the most part has been passed in Boston or its immediate vicinity, although in the fall of 1892 I went as far west as Nebraska and Minnesota, again visited Chicago at the time of the World's Fair, and have travelled somewhat extensively through the eastern provinces of Canada."

*JOHN FRANCIS MAHONEY

Son of WILLIAM and MARY (BUCKLEY) MAHONEY. Was born at Waltham, September 30, 1862. Entered college in July, 1881, from Waltham High School.

While at school he determined on the profession of medicine as his life work. At college he followed his plan with great singleness of purpose, taking largely courses in chemistry and natural history. His faithful work in natural history led to an unsolicited election to the Natural History Society. During his last year in college he took, in addition to his regular college studies, the first year work in the Harvard Medical School. After graduating from the college in '85 he thus became able to complete in two years his course in the Medical School, from which he graduated in 1887. From the fall of 1887 until his death he practised his profession of medicine in Chelsea, Massachusetts. His untiring energy, ability, and close application soon built for him a large and lucrative practice. He was a member of the medical staff of Frost Hospital in Chelsea. In his professional life he gave the same untiring energy to his work that he did to his college work. He took little time for rest or recreation. The result was inevitable. His health became shattered. He tried California at the request of his friends, but it was too late. He died at Los Angeles of tuberculosis on December 28, 1900, within a few weeks of his arrival there.

EDWARD DUDLEY MARSH

SON OF IVORY WHITE RICHARDSON and MARY SHEPHERD (WHITMAN) MARSH. Was born at Newport, Rhode Island, January 31, 1864. Entered college in July, 1881, from Rogers High School, Newport.

"After graduation I spent fifteen years as a teacher in preparatory schools, giving up that to enter the business of cotton brokerage, in which I have remained up to the present date. With the exception of two years spent abroad, chiefly at Oxford, I have been steadily on the job trying to keep even, as nearly as possible, with varying success. It seems a shame to let so much good paper go to waste, but even imagination balks at the task of supplying incidents out of my life which would justify the expenditure of several hundred words to describe them. Furthermore, one of the most treasured precepts which I bore away with me from the classic halls of our Alma Mater was that praiseworthy as the spider is from many points of view, his habit of spinning his web from his own entrails is the least deserving of his characteristics from an autobiographical standpoint."

MANTON MAVERICK

SON OF AUGUSTUS and ELLEN (GROVER) MAVERICK. Was born at Staten Island, New York, March 26, 1863. Entered college in July, 1881, from Needham High School.

"In 1885-86 I taught the High School in Whitefield, New Hampshire. From then until the spring of 1891 I was in the government service at Washington, District of Columbia — Adjutant General's Office, Pension Office, House of Representatives (clerk of committee, not member of Congress). Took three years' law course in Columbian (now George Washington) University, receiving LL.B. and LL.M. Admitted to Bar in Washington in 1889. In 1891 came to Chicago and engaged in general practice of law until 1903, when I formed my present association with the Continental Casualty Co. as its general attorney. Although still nominally the law officer of the company, I am more actively engaged in the general work of an insurance company. I remained a bachelor until nearly a confirmed one, but finally was married in 1905. Have no children. Have no particular fads — do not even play golf. Have done considerable Masonic work and am Past Commander of one of the Chicago Commanderies of Knights Templars. On the whole have worked hard and prospered fairly, leading the more or less humdrum life of the average American citizen." He is a member of the University Club of Chicago.

EDMUND SMITH MIDDLETON

SON OF GEORGE ARMSTRONG and MARY AUGUSTA (SMITH) MIDDLETON. Was born at New York City, January 16, 1862. Entered college in October, 1881, having prepared himself.

"The year following graduation was spent in travel in this country. In the autumn of 1886 I entered the General Theological Seminary, New York, graduating in 1889. During my seminary course I won the Alumni Prize in Ecclesiastical History and the Seymour Prize for Extemporaneous preaching. In 1889 Bishop Henry C. Potter ordained me deacon, and priest in 1890. I was curate at All Saints, Worcester, Massachusetts, for a year, but eighteen months after my ordination as an Episcopalian clergyman I withdrew from the ministry and entered the Roman church, and remained in that communion for four years. During this period I taught a year in the Preparatory Department of St. Francis Xavier's College, New York, and at the same time took a post-graduate course in the college in Philosophy, receiving the M.A. degree in 1893. Later I studied some months in the Paulist House of Studies in Washington, District of Columbia, and at St. Mary's Seminary, Baltimore, Maryland. A year in Europe followed, also my marriage in 1893. In 1894 I returned to the Episcopalian church, and for ten years was a teacher of Latin and Greek in preparatory schools, and for two years did actuarial work in life insurance. In 1904 I became Master of Greek in Trinity School, New York, where I am at the present time. In 1905 I was restored to the Episcopalian ministry and belong to the Diocese of New York. Yonkers has been my residence for the last ten years. Twenty years or more ago I wrote some occasional verse, and have written a few short stories within the last ten years. In my salad days I published a volume of short stories entitled "A Study in Girls." In 1906 he was made a B.D. by the General Theological Seminary of New York. He is a member of The Churchmen's Association and The American Church Union of New York, a Royal Arch Mason, a member of other fraternal orders, and secretary of the Society for the Preservation of Indian Folk Songs. In 1904 he wrote the ode for the dedication of the Carnegie Library at Yonkers, New York.

*EZRA PALMER MILLS

SON of JOHN FRANKLIN and SARAH RUMLEY (DUDLEY) MILLS. Was born at Boston, June 28, 1864. Entered college in July, 1881, from St. Mark's School.

After a four-years' course he graduated with honors in June, 1885. In July of the same year he married Miss May B. Meeker, of Bridgeport, Connecticut, and in the fall of 1885 entered Columbia Law School. During the two ensuing years he was also in a law office, and, on completing his course at the law school, he was admitted to the New York bar. From year to year his practice increased, until, January, 1895, he was a victim of "La Grippe." Having a strong constitution and an enormous amount of will-power, Mills could not give up, and tried to make his family as well as himself think that the sickness would soon pass away. After a summer at the mountains he had, on his return to New York, a severe attack of pleurisy, and from that time until his death he journeyed to California, to Europe, and to the South in search of the health which he could not find. It was with the hope of prolonging his life that he undertook a second trip to California, intending to make his home there, but he died January 21, 1900, at Pasadena, California. Mills was a member of Kane Lodge, F. and A.M. of New York City, a member of the Harvard Club of New York, and also a member of the Sons of the Revolution. He was a communicant of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, and for many years took an active part in the mission work of that church. His son, Harold Palmer Mills, graduates this year from Harvard.

See Report V., page 44.

JUSTIN PERRY MINER

Son of WILLIAM RUSH and LYDIA ANN (GIFFORD) MINER. Was born at Sheridan, New York, October 1, 1850. Entered college in October, 1881, under the tutorship of L. M. Robinson.

“In this age of doing things I might be said to excel in the variety of things attempted, but not fully accomplished. Have been connected for the most part with the school-book publishing business. While not travelling, have been located at times in New York, Chicago, and Buffalo. The past year have confined my travels to a portion of New York and Pennsylvania, and am now located temporarily in Buffalo, but still retain Sheridan, New York, as a permanent address.” For two years (1885-87) he was in charge of the public schools of Grafton, North Dakota. He has just become editor of the Grape Belt at Dunkirk, New York.

ALFRED HENNEN MORRIS

SON of JOHN ALBERT MORRIS, S.B., 1857, and CORA (HENNEN) MORRIS. Was born at Wilmington, Delaware, March 3, 1864. Joined our class as a junior, having previously been a special student.

"In the autumn of 1885 began a post-graduate course at Harvard College, but was unable to complete it on account of illness, which compelled me to give up all work for two years. Led a quiet life at peace with all the world until 1889, when I was married. In July of the same year had a severe case of typhoid fever, and afterwards travelled in Europe a year to recuperate. Then returned home and took up management of various business enterprises, and entered politics. Was twice elected supervisor of the town of Westchester and once member of the Assembly, and was appointed school commissioner of New York City in 1900. Have not been active in politics lately, and my life has been uneventful since 1902. I spend my winters in the South overlooking the management of various properties and enterprises. My son, a graduate of Pomfret School, entered Harvard in 1909 as a freshman." He is a member of the Metropolitan and New York Yacht Clubs of New York and of the Boston Club of New Orleans.

JAMES GREGORY MUMFORD

SON of GEORGE ELIHU and JULIA EMMA (HILLS) MUMFORD. Was born at Rochester, New York, December 2, 1863. Entered college in July, 1880, from St. Paul's School.

"After graduation from college I left my old home in Rochester, New York, and have lived in Boston for the past twenty-five years. I attended the Harvard Medical School from 1885 to 1889, in the old Boylston Street building, — then recently opened and looked to as the home of medicine for one hundred years to come. We moved out of it in 1906. While studying medicine I lived at 14 Mt. Vernon St., with a congenial company of men, — '84, '85, '86. In 1889 I spent six months in Europe, and then returned home to become a house surgeon at the Massachusetts General Hospital, whence I was graduated in 1890. In the same year I received my M.D. from Harvard, and a diploma from the Boston Lying-In Hospital. I opened my first office for practice at No. 2 Walnut St., Boston, on January 1, 1891, and was for some four years thereafter assistant to Dr. Maurice H. Richardson, '73. In October, 1891, I moved to 197 Beacon St., and on January 6, 1892, I married. I lived in the Beacon St. house for ten years — until driven out by a cruel landlord, whose name I withhold. Since 1901 I have lived and worked at 29 Commonwealth Avenue. From 1893 to 1904, inclusive, I spent my summers at Nahant, Massachusetts, where I practised, groaning, among the gay vacation folks. The simple record runs on, telling of mild employments in the Harvard Medical School, where I am a member of the Faculty and a teacher of surgery; at the Carney Hospital, where I was once a visiting surgeon; at the Massachusetts General Hospital, where I am, and expect to remain, a visiting surgeon until removed by age and incapacity. I like teaching; students pass me out the usual compliments due to credulous senility. I like practising surgery; patients toss me roses mingled with thorns. I like writing about people and things, for the reviewers deal me comments which chasten the soul. Altogether, life continues a pleasant experience. I look with composure to the next twenty-five years." He is a member of the Somerset Club and of numerous medical societies. For a time he was a surgeon of the Massachusetts Naval Brigade, and more recently has one of the honorary appointments to the Medical Reserve Corps of the United States Army.

WILLIAM STANISLAUS MURPHY

SON of PATRICK JAMES and JULIA (GALLAGHER) MURPHY. Was born at Boston, October 6, 1860. Entered college in July, 1881, from Boston Latin School.

He has been in the Boston Custom House since graduation with the exception of the first year, when he taught school. He writes: "Have lived only the simple life, with no regrets, fortunate in good health and with a fond desire to live life over again."

JOHN BREED NEWHALL

SON of CHARLES and HESTER CELIA (MOULTON) NEWHALL. Was born at Lynn, Massachusetts, October 1, 1862. Entered college in July, 1881, from Lynn High School.

He followed his college course by that at the Harvard Law School, where he took his degree in 1888. He has since practised his profession at his home in Lynn and at Boston. In the public life of his native city he has taken his part ably, — first in the common council, then as one of its representatives in the legislature, and later on the school committee; in all nine years of service. He was president of the council for two years and chairman of the school committee. In the winter of 1909 he ran for mayor but was defeated. He is trustee of the Lynn Institution for Savings. He is a member of the University Club of Boston.

SETH NICHOLS

SON of GEORGE BATES and MARY LOUISA (RHODES) NICHOLS. Was born at Roxbury, August 9, 1862. Entered college in July, 1881, from Roxbury Latin School.

For two and a half years after graduation he was in the wool business in Boston. He then moved to New York and became a partner in the firm of Smith & Nichols, oil and wax merchants. In May, 1908, the firm extended its business to Boston and Nichols took up his residence in Brookline. He has a summer home at Princeton, Massachusetts. He is a member of the University Club of New York.

He was recognized by his friends as one of the brightest men in his Class, showing a faculty for close reasoning and a maturity of judgment on abstract and literary topics that made him an influence upon those who knew him best. His keen sense of humor, combined with more solid qualities, made him a delightful companion, whose society was much sought, as is shown by the list of college organizations — Institute, Hasty Pudding, Alpha Delta Phi, and Porcellian Clubs — of which he was a member. On leaving college he went into the office of the Union Pacific in Boston, and was transferred in the course of a few months to the company's office at Omaha, Nebraska. The work was uncongenial, and after about two years of it, illness obliged him to give it up. In the autumn of 1888 he entered the Harvard Law School, remaining there until the spring of 1890, when he left the school to take up some private tutoring in New York, which occupied him, together with vacations here and abroad, until the fall of 1892. At this time he entered as a student the law offices of Messrs. Shattuck & Munroe. He was admitted to the Suffolk Bar the following year, and soon after began practising for himself. Illness, however, again intervened after a short period of active practice, and although he kept his office to the last he was prevented for several years from doing much work. Although the years were filled with physical suffering of a peculiarly intense kind, they were powerless to destroy in him either his sense of humor or his old-time cheerfulness and pluck. The end came at last at Bellport, New York, on December 3, 1904, when a stroke of apoplexy carried him away.

WILLIAM BELDEN NOBLE

SON OF BELDEN AND ADELIN MATILDA (FERRIS) NOBLE. Was born at Essex, New York, October 17, 1860. Entered college in October, 1880. Joined our Class as a senior, from Class of 1884.

His first collegiate work was done at Princeton, where he passed one year before entering Harvard in the Class of '84. He entered at once into the life of the college, in the full vigor of youth, and with the highest ideals. He applied himself conscientiously to his studies, and at the same time, as long as his health permitted, spent considerable energy in athletics and literary work. He played on his Freshman Class Football Eleven and on the University Lacrosse Twelve, of which he was also the captain for a time. His literary tastes made him an earnest and constant writer for the Crimson Bi-Weekly, the daily Herald Crimson, and for outside papers, while his social life found expression through his membership in the O. K., the Institute of 1770, the D. K. E., and the Hasty Pudding Club. But his close attention to his studies, together with his other interests in the life of the university, proved too great a strain, and in his junior year he was obliged to leave the university on account of nervous prostration. After resting for a year he returned to Cambridge in the senior year of our Class, and, although not in good health, took up his studies again, and was graduated among those of the highest rank of the Class of '85, receiving honorable mention in English, English composition, and political economy, and being entitled to a dissertation as a Commencement part. The dissertation which he delivered was upon Faith, — a fitting subject for one whose whole life and thought were consecrated to Truth and guided by Faith. After graduation he passed some time in travel and in the care of his father's estate. In 1887 he was married to Miss Nannie Yulee of Florida. In 1888 he returned to Cambridge with his wife, to prepare himself for the ministry, and studied for two years in the Episcopal Theological School. His health, however, would not permit him to continue his studies, or to do active work, and for the last few years of his life he travelled constantly with his family in a hopeless search for health. He died at Glenwood, Colorado, July 27, 1896. Everywhere, those who met him were impressed with his fine personality and inspired by his spiritual, guileless life. Only the day before his death, just as he was leaving his ranch life in Colorado to join his family in the East, he wrote to his devoted wife: "I live in the ever-present consciousness of my God, so near, so loving, so great." That expression was the undertone of his life, the spiritual growth of that faith which he hoped to teach. In all his intellectual pursuits and spiritual aspirations his wife gave him full sympathy, and together they strove after the same ideals. His only daughter, Yulee Noble, was married at St. John's Church, Washington, on November 24, 1909, to Lieutenant Sherman Miles, only son of Gen. Nelson A. Miles, U. S. A., retired, formerly the commanding officer of the army. A full description of the William Belden Noble Lectures foundation established by Mrs. Noble is given in Report VI., as noted below. Since that report the following series have been delivered: In 1906, the sixth series, on "The Attitude of Jesus Christ towards Foreign Races and Religions," by Rev. Charles Cuthbert Hall, president of the Union Theological Seminary of New York. In 1907, the seventh series, on "Leadership," by Rt. Rev. Charles H. Brent, Bishop of the Philippine Islands. In 1909, the eighth series, on "The Ethics of Jesus," by Rev. Henry Churchill King, D.D., LL.D., president of Oberlin College.

ELIOT NORTON

SON OF CHARLES ELIOT NORTON, 1846; A.M., LL.D., 1887; professor and professor emeritus of the History of Art, and SUSAN RIDLEY (SEDGWICK) NORTON. Was born at Cambridge July 1, 1863. Entered college in October, 1881, under the tutorship of James Byrne.

He graduated from the Harvard Law School with the honor degree and then chose New York City as the field for his activities. He has practised law continuously, sometimes by himself and at other times in various partnership combinations. At present he is associated with Mumford, '84, under the firm name of Norton & Mumford. He has not held public office, but is a director in several corporations and a trustee of the Italian Savings Bank, and a Cavaliere of the Order of S. S. Maurizio and Lazzare. This honor was conferred upon him by the Italian government because of his efforts in behalf of its citizens while he was president of the Italian Immigrant Society of New York. He is a member of the University, Grolier, and Lawyers' Clubs.

EDWARD ISAAC KIMBALL NOYES

SON of ISAAC LOUIS and CAROLINE (BRIDGEMAN) NOYES. Was born at Montreal, Canada, December 18, 1861. Entered college in October, 1881, from Phillips Exeter Academy, and under the tutorship of John A. Brown.

"There has not been much of interest in my life, either to point a moral, or adorn a tale, since graduation. I spent several years as stenographer and secretary, and in 1890 started in business in Boston as a dealer in investment bonds, principally what are now known as Public Service Securities. With the exception of a long trip abroad in 1894, when my health gave out, I have continued in the same line up to the present time. I married again in 1905, and now have two boys, — Stewart Bridgeman Noyes, born in 1906, and Donald Edward Noyes, born January 23, 1910, — and expect both of them, if they live, to have the same advantage of a Harvard education that I did." For eight months after graduation he was secretary to Prof. N. S. Shaler.

GEORGE READ NUTTER

SON of THOMAS FRANKLIN and JULIA ADELAIDE (READ) NUTTER. Was born at Boston, August 9, 1863. Entered college in July, 1881, from Boston Latin School.

"The first year after graduation I filled the position of President's Secretary at Cambridge, and also taught in the English Department. In the autumn of 1886 I entered the Law School, graduating in 1889. In the Law School I was one of the original board of editors of the Harvard Law Review, and became editor-in-chief of the second volume. While editor-in-chief it occurred to me that it would be wise for the Review to make, if possible, some provision for the future. I had in my mind the example of the Harvard Advocate, which in the day of its prosperity gave to the Harvard Library its surplus earnings. We therefore created a trust fund for the surplus of each year, and three trustees were chosen, — Prof. James Barr Ames, Louis D. Brandeis, and myself, — who served without a break until the lamented death of Dean Ames in January of this year. During two of the years at the Law School I continued also in the English Department, having part charge of Sophomore Themes, and assisting Prof. Barrett Wendell in a new course in English Composition, English 12. After leaving Cambridge I was appointed by the Board of Overseers a member of the Committee on English Composition and Rhetoric, and am still serving on that committee. My position as President's Secretary made me acquainted, I believe, with every professor then connected with the university, and gave me an appreciation of the work of President Eliot and his immense service to Harvard and the cause of education which I could only have obtained on the inside. In the autumn of 1886 I took a small part as head of the registration department in the two hundred and fiftieth anniversary of Harvard College. I left Cambridge in 1889, and was admitted to the Bar in Boston. I entered the office of Warren & Brandeis, where I have remained. On January 1, 1897, the firm became Brandeis, Dunbar & Nutter, and now consists of Louis D. Brandeis, L., '77, D. Blakely Hoar, '76, William H. Dunbar, '82, Edward F. McClellen, L., '95, J. Butler Studley, '99, and myself. Without holding any political office, I have been interested in the municipal politics in Boston for many years. I was a member, and finally chairman, of the Executive Committee of the Public School Association, a non-partisan organization founded for the purpose of electing capable members to the School Committee. Both Storrow and Cushing were elected to the School Committee, as candidates of this Association. In 1904 I became a member of the Executive Committee of the newly-formed Good Government Association, and have continued as a member ever since then. The committee consisted of five, I as the representative of the Merchants' Association. If the doings of this Association are ever written they will make an interesting chapter in municipal history. The original work of the Association was to investigate and report on the records of candidates for municipal office, but it has enlarged its functions by inducing good men to run for office, and by active participation in their election, as well as in various other directions. It has, I believe, become a power in Boston politics, and one reason for its influence has been its readiness, when necessary, to sink its own identity and to form other bodies and committees to carry out special work. The Good Government Association, or the 'G. G. A.' as it is familiarly called, had much to do with putting through the appointment of the Finance Commission, — a body of seven citizens who investigated with great thoroughness the affairs of the city of Boston. The Finance Commission recommended to the Legislature a new charter, which had several new and interesting features, and I served as a member of the Executive Committee of a committee of one hundred, organized to put through the adoption of this charter. The Legislature passed the charter, and left by referendum to the people a choice between two plans of certain political as distinct from administrative measures. 'Plan 2,' as it was called, was unique in providing for a small city council, nominated by direct nomination papers, and elected on a ballot from which all party designations were abolished. The Committee of One Hundred supported 'Plan 2,' and I wrote and spoke much in the campaign in favor of it. 'Plan 2' was adopted at the State election in November, 1909, although the machines of both political parties were arrayed against it. The Executive Committee then organized, to conduct the first campaign, a committee of twenty-five, from which by a 'self-denying ordinance' every member of the Executive Committee was excluded. This committee of twenty-five increased its number to one hundred and fifty, and became the Citizens' Municipal League, which nominated Storrow for Mayor. I did what I could in this election to bring about Storrow's election. He was defeated by 1402 in a total vote of 95,895, and would undoubtedly have been elected had a third candidate, who polled 1814 votes, retired from the contest. This was, I confess, a bitter disappointment, after several years of hard and remarkably successful work. But the end is not yet. We are now watching with interest the workings of the new charter. I have also served on the Membership Committee of the new Chamber of Commerce, of which Storrow was the first president. This is another manifestation of the recent public spirit in Boston, and now, with a membership of over thirty-seven hundred, is one of the largest in the country. For three years I was treasurer, and for two years president of the Puritan Club of Boston, and am now on the Board of Governors of the St. Botolph Club. My vacations I have spent chiefly in fishing, hunting, and canoeing, generally with our classmate, S. S. Bartlett. We have traversed the region of the Allegash, Penobscot, and Aroostook rivers in Maine, and the Nepisiguit in New Brunswick, and I am now making my trips, both summer and winter, among the French Canadians of Quebec. We spent the summer of 1893 together in England. We have thus in a small and modest way endeavored to live up to the modern sporting ideal." He is also a member of the Union and other clubs.

JOSÉ VICTORIO OÑATIVIA

Son of JOSÉ VICTORIO and GEORGINA (JONES) OÑATIVIA. Was born at New York City, February 17, 1863. Entered college in October, 1881, from St. Paul's School.

He has divided his time between New York City and travel in this country and Europe. For many years the family were more abroad than at home. He is now engaged in financial business in New York as Oñativia & Co. He is a member of the Union Club of New York. His son, J. V. Oñativia, Jr., was the first son of an '85 man to graduate from Harvard, in the class of '08, doing his work in three years. He rowed and took part in track athletics. J. V. Oñativia, Jr., married Clara Wright Barclay of New York, April 21, 1908.

CHAUNCEY GOODRICH PARKER

Son of CORTLANDT and ELIZABETH WOLCOTT (STILES) PARKER. Was born at Newark, New Jersey, September 19, 1864. Entered college in October, 1881, from Phillips Exeter Academy.

"Upon graduation, my first duty was to choose an occupation. While in college I had been urged to take up medicine, particularly as three of my older brothers had already become lawyers. I gave this serious consideration, but at length abandoned it, and selected the law, my father's profession. This, I think, was to his liking, for he had the truest professional zeal, and idealized his profession as the widest field for public usefulness. For two years I attended the Columbia College Law School in New York. I was likewise entered as a student in my father's office in Newark, and for a time in Vanderpoel, Green & Cuming's office in New York. After graduating at the Law School, my father suggested that I spend a year at Harvard Law School. This pleased me mightily, and gave me the opportunity of sitting before Langdell, Ames and Thayer, and meeting many of my college classmates. I was received in Cambridge most warmly by our friends Williams, Hobbs, Nutter, Sanford, and many other classmates. I lived at Wadsworth House with Williams. I was elected to the Pow Wow. I spent a most useful and delightful year. Though tempted by my friends to start practice in Boston, I was urged by my father to return to New Jersey, and begin practice there. I did so, and was admitted to the New Jersey Bar in June, 1888. I at once essayed in practice, and with Sherrerd Depue, Esq., formed the firm of Depue & Parker. We were partners for ten years. He then joined R. V. Lindabury, now our most notable lawyer. I went on alone. In 1889 and 1892 I passed summers in Europe. In 1896 I was married, and my home life has been happy and serene. I am blessed with five children, and have lost none. In 1907 my parents died within a few months of each other. My contemporaries tell me that I am a successful lawyer. I have certainly worked hard, and have always tried to do my work thoroughly. That work is confining, and my tastes have not led me into politics. I like the struggles in court, the battles before a jury, and the argument of cases in the higher courts. I have been 'mentioned' for selection as Justice of the Supreme Court, but I have never sought public office. Nor have the charms of money-making seduced me from my professional life. In politics, I have belonged to no party. I supported Cleveland for president while he led the Democratic Party; since then I have voted for McKinley and Taft, and am generally classed as a Republican." He is a member of the Essex and other clubs of Newark, and of the Down Town Association and Bar Association of New York City. He has been president of the Harvard Club of New Jersey and a corresponding secretary of the Harvard Law School Association. He has also been president of the Essex County Lawyers' Club, and now as treasurer, runs its law library. He was one of the commissioners to settle the disputed boundary line between New Jersey and Delaware. Some years ago he served with the Essex Troop.

GEORGE FAIRBANKS PARTRIDGE

SON of ASA and JEMIMA ADAMS (FAIRBANKS) PARTRIDGE. Was born at Bellingham, August 26, 1863. Entered college in October, 1881, from Woonsocket High School.

"I have studied in a State Normal School and taken courses at Harvard at various times. For four years I taught in a private preparatory school, three years in two Massachusetts High Schools, and for sixteen years in the Jamaica Plain High School, where my work has been mostly German and Mathematics. I have three children. Two summers I have had abroad, — one with my wife and one with my oldest son." He has been an officer of various teachers' and other clubs, and is clerk of the Central Congregational Church of Jamaica Plain.

JAMES KIRKE PAULDING

SON of JAMES NATHANIEL and EMILY (PEARSON) PAULDING. Was born at Cold Spring, New York, August 1, 1863. Entered college in July, 1881, from Adams Academy.

"After leaving college I went into journalism, becoming a reporter on the New York Herald. During one session of the State Legislature I was correspondent of this paper at Albany. After between two and three years' work I went abroad to study for a year and a half at a German university. On my return I took up educational and social service work, in which I have been interested ever since, varying it with the writing of occasional magazine articles and with trips abroad to visit relatives in Europe. During one winter I taught at the Ethical Culture School, New York, and have been a member of several local school boards. At present I am a member and secretary of the municipal commission in charge of the public hospitals of Manhattan and the Bronx."

HORATIO PERRY PEIRSON

SON of EDWARD BROOKS PEIRSON, 1840; A.M.; M.D., 1844, and ELLEN ELIZABETH (PERRY) PEIRSON. Was born at Salem, April 13, 1865. Entered college in July, 1881, from Salem High School.

"Have been in the woollen commission business in Boston since graduation and have resided in Salem. Am much interested in school matters in Salem, and have served ten years on the School Committee there, the last seven years being president of that body." He is president of the Salem Golf Club.

CHARLES ALBERT PETERSON

SON of CHARLES EDWARD and CHARLOTTE WILHELMINA (TOLL) PETERSON. Was born at Boston, November 25, 1861. Entered college in October, 1881, from Boston Latin School.

Peterson entered Massachusetts Institute of Technology as a regular in the electrical engineering course and took the S.B. degree in 1888. The next year was spent in teaching that subject at the University of Pennsylvania. Up to five years ago he taught at Bryant and Stratton's Commercial College in Boston, when ill health compelled him to give up his duties there. He writes: "During the past five years I have devoted a part of the time to private tutoring." His residence, which was formerly Boston, has been on Dana St., Cambridge, for many years.

JAMES KIRKE PAULDING

HORATIO PERRY PETERSON

CHARLES ALBERT PETERSON

REUBEN PETERSON

Son of REUBEN and JULIA TURNER (BEALE) PETERSON. Was born at East Boston, June 29, 1862. Entered college in July, 1881, from Boston Latin School.

“After receiving my degree from the Harvard Medical School in 1889 and serving as interne in three Boston hospitals, I settled in Grand Rapids in 1890. In the same year occurred the principal event of my life, when I persuaded Mrs. Peterson to cast in her lot with mine. From 1890 to 1898 I was in general practice in Grand Rapids, although my work became more and more restricted to surgery and gynecology. In 1898 I removed to Chicago, where I taught gynecology in the Post Graduate Medical School and in Rush Medical College. In 1901 I was appointed professor of Obstetrics and Diseases of Women in the University of Michigan, necessitating removal to Ann Arbor in the same year. The past eight years have passed very quickly, as is usually the case when one is happy and busy amidst congenial surroundings. During these years I have labored to build up the department of which I am the head, whether successfully or not is for others to say. Perhaps I derive the greatest satisfaction from being in a position to offer exceptional surgical opportunities to my assistants, whereby I am able to send forth each year one or two well-equipped men.” He is a member of numerous medical societies and has been president of the Chicago Gynecological Society and president of the Harvard Club of Michigan.

JOHN SANBURN PHILLIPS

Son of EDGAR E. and MARY (SANBURN) PHILLIPS. Was born at Council Bluffs, Iowa, July 2, 1861. Entered college in October, 1883, as a junior, from Knox College.

During the summer following graduation he was married at Oneida, Illinois, on August 25, to Emma Delia West. Went to Germany, and remained for a year at Leipsic, studying at the university. Upon his return he joined forces with his old friend at Knox College, S. S. McClure, in editorial and magazine work in New York City. From this combination sprang McClure, Phillips & Co., McClure's Magazine, The Idler, McClure Magazine and Newspaper Syndicate, and other allied companies and publishing houses. He was an editor and manager of McClure's Magazine; treasurer and manager of the S. S. McClure Co., the publishers of McClure's Magazine; the treasurer of Doubleday & McClure Co., book publishers; treasurer of S. S. McClure, Limited; controlling The Associated Literary Press; and president of McClure-Tissot Co. In 1906 he parted company from McClure and with several associates bought control of the American Magazine, of which as the head and leading spirit he is making a success. Spends his summers at Duxbury, Massachusetts. He is a member of the Century, Grolier, and Players' Clubs of New York.

PALMER ELLIS PRESBREY

SON OF EDWARD AUGUSTUS and RUTH WHITE (HOLMES) PRESBREY. Was born at Boston, February 21, 1863. Entered college in July, 1881, from Cambridge High School.

Soon after graduating he entered the National Bank of Redemption, Boston, and with the exception of three months at the Harvard Law School in 1887, remained with that bank until 1904, when it combined with the First National Bank, Boston, under the latter title. He is now assistant cashier of that bank, is unmarried, and lives in Brookline. He is a member of the Executive Committee, and for many years was the secretary of the United States National Lawn Tennis Association, and of the University Club of Boston, secretary of the Longwood Cricket Club, and a member of The Country Club, Brookline, Boston Athletic Association, and Harvard Clubs of New York and Boston. He was one of the building committee which is responsible for the new Pi Eta Club-house.

FREDERIC EUGENE PUFFER

SON OF DEXTER RICHARDSON and MARY (THOMAS) PUFFER. Was born at Sudbury, June 25, 1864. Entered college in October, 1882, as a sophomore, from Chauncy Hall.

REUBEN PETERSON

JOHN SANBORN PHILLIPS

PALMER ELLIS PRESBREY

“About the time of my graduation I wandered down to the State of Maine with a view to instructing the inhabitants how to make paper scientifically. As I found they did not appreciate my methods, after about a year, I returned, tackled the street paving business, and joined the community known as asphalt pirates from their habit of cruising about the country and appropriating the profits naturally belonging to contractors with inferior materials and superior pulls. For some ten years I was connected with a company which under the guidance of a Harvard graduate endeavored to carry on business on a high plane. Efforts to hold up my end in this struggle resulted in illness, and a couple of years' lost time to recuperate. For several years I worked for a number of companies that knew nothing of the high plane but aimed directly for the mizouma. They did not get it, while the H. G.'s company did, for they sold out to a trust. For four years, 1901-04, I had the honor of holding public office or employment in a foreign country as expert in asphalt paving for the city of Winnipeg, Canada. Citizens of that municipality learned from me how to make good pavement, and I learned from them that they knew a lot more about decent city government than do the citizens of my native land. However, in the matter of sanitation they had their shortcomings, for one summer a thousand cases of typhoid fever developed, among which my name figured as one numeral, and this meant another year's rest for me. The next call to the world's work was in the editorial line, and I joined the staff of the Municipal Journal and Engineer. In November, 1907, my wife died, and since then I have plodded on alone.”

SHERIDAN PITT READ

SON OF SHERIDAN PITT and OLIVIA FLINN (SMITH) READ. Was born at Paris, Illinois, September 14, 1861. Entered college in July, 1880, from Phillips Exeter Academy.

Read has enjoyed the most picturesque life of any man in the Class, in which an early marriage, travel, government service, business, study, and the San Francisco earthquake all figure. After the first three years devoted in part to business, to travel in Europe, and foreign study, came several years in the service of Russell & Co., at Canton, China, with his first public service as acting consul for Norway and Sweden. When Russell & Co. went out of business in 1891 he travelled and studied, and in 1893 returned to China as United States Consul at Tientsin, and was there during the China-Japanese war. Later he headed the United States Szechuen Investigating Commission, travelling west from Tientsin, almost to Thibet. In 1898 he returned to the United States. A year later he was again in China, and established himself in business there. Then for five or six years he was in the United States in the foreign trade. His last trip to the "East" was shortly before the San Francisco disaster of 1906. He returned to California just in time to have his household effects consumed in the fire. Severe sickness followed, during his convalescence from which, on a New Hampshire farm, he busied himself in preparing Read's Hub Telegraphic Code. He is now United States consular agent at Boulogne-sur-Mer, France.

WATERS DEWEES ROBERTS

SON OF THOMAS and ELIZABETH HILL (BISSELL) ROBERTS. Was born at Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, May 10, 1865. Entered college in October, 1884, as a senior, from University of Pennsylvania.

"To sum up twenty-five years in as many lines is an interesting effort. From most of us, who have lead normal lives, the verdict is the same, — that solid accomplishments and the lasting happinesses have come from employment and home. Three years of study at the Episcopal Theological School in Cambridge, five years as assistant minister at Trinity Church, Boston, a winter in Germany, thirteen years as rector of St. John's Church, East Boston, three years as rector of St. Michael's Church, Milton, Massachusetts, make up the record of work. Four of the years at Trinity were spent in close association with Phillips Brooks. Nothing could be more inspiring than to work under such a man. To be with him week by week was to grow in admiration both for what he did and for what he was. Two or three published articles about Phillips Brooks are the only literary work satisfying enough to me to mention. In East Boston the task of being responsible for the building of a church was full of interest. The unusual experience of working first in the specially privileged congregation at Trinity and then in comparatively unprivileged East Boston impressed me strongly, not with the dissimilarity, but with the sameness of motive and ambition which exists in the different parts of the body politic. Assimilation of immigration in the tenement is repeated in assimilation of new people and new families among the financially or the intellectually privileged. Of the satisfactions which have come from the home it is unnatural to speak, except to say a word of earnest gratitude. To transfer one's ambitions from one's self to one's children is a very happy thing to do. The hopefulness of graduation, as we knew it twenty-five years ago, comes back, in spite of bruises and failures, as one watches young life surging forward to do its work of enriching the years that are to follow." He is a director of the Associated Charities of Boston.

CHARLES PROSSER ROBINSON

SON OF SAMUEL MARSHAL and EMMA LOUISA (PROSSER) ROBINSON. Was born at Parker's Landing, Pennsylvania, October 11, 1863. Entered college in October, 1884, as a senior, from Allegheny College.

"After receiving the degree of LL.B. from the Harvard Law School I entered the law office of David T. Watson of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, and spent several years there as his assistant. I then started out for myself, and probably my most successful work was the American Bank cases, which I managed and won after a long legal contest, and the result placed me on Easy Street for the rest of my life. My father died April 1, 1908, and left me in charge of a large fortune. I was married July 15, 1909, to Miss Margaret Alma Lord."

EDWARD DRAKE ROE, JR.

SON of EDWARD DRAKE and ELENOR JANE (FROST) ROE. Was born at Elmira, New York, January 4, 1859. Entered college in October, 1884, as a senior, from Syracuse University.

The year following his graduation from Harvard he spent at Cambridge and obtained the degree of A.M. for work in mathematics and philosophy. Two years of teaching followed, and then two more years in the graduate department. At this time he took part in founding the Harvard Graduate Club, of which he was the first secretary and later vice-president. The two years 1890-92 he was instructor in mathematics at Boston University, when he was called to Oberlin as associate professor of mathematics, a position he continued to fill for seven years. In the latter two he was on leave of absence in Germany, where he took his Ph.D. at Erlangen in 1898. In 1900 he was made professor of mathematics at Syracuse University, Elmira, New York. He is a member of the American Academy for the Advancement of Science, and of various organizations connected with Syracuse University. He writes: "Since my last report, in addition to my regular work as professor of mathematics in the University, I have joined the ranks of the amateur astronomers. I believed this to be the most suitable, healthful, and profitable form of recreation in which I could engage. Accordingly on my own responsibility, without any invitation from abroad, I erected an astronomical observatory in the spring of 1906. It is equipped with an Alvan Clark & Sons 6½ inch equatorial refractor, with clock work and micrometer. I have observed sun, moon, planets, comets, and double stars. Some of the observations have been published in the journals devoted to the subject. I have, however, chiefly worked on the testing of objectives and the measurement and discovery of double stars. Some other mathematical papers or books have also been published in the interval."

CHARLES PROSSER ROBINSON

EDWARD DRAKE ROLFE

GEORGE WILLIAM ROLFE

GEORGE WILLIAM ROLFE

SON of WILLIAM JAMES ROLFE, A.M. (Hon.), 1859, and ELIZA JANE (CAREW) ROLFE. Was born at Cambridge, February 10, 1864. Entered college in July, 1881, from Cambridge High School.

"My career began as an assistant in the Chemical Laboratory of Harvard University while a candidate for the A.M. degree. After a couple of months' travel in Europe (1886-89), I was chemist for The Charles Pope Glucose Co. at Geneva, Illinois. I studied for a few months at the Cook County Normal School, obtained a first-grade teacher's certificate from City of Boston; was one year submaster in Brookline, Massachusetts, High School. During the winter of 1891 and 1892 I was in Cuba, first as chemist of Central Parque Alto (Fowler & Co.), then for E. Atkins & Co. at Central Soledad; 1893 was chemist for the Charles Pope Glucose Co. at Geneva, Illinois; 1894 I was studying at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and later engaged as chemist at Newport to investigate a sewage purification process for Col. George E. Waring; 1895 I was an instructor at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, which position I still hold; 1900-01 as chemist for Central Aguirre Co., Porto Rico; 1902 was expert for Charles Pope Glucose Co. in United States Court at Chicago (Chicago Sugar Refining Co. v. C. Pope Glucose Co.); summer of 1902 sent to Porto Rico by the Central Aguirre Co. to take charge of uncompleted crop; 1903-05 at Massachusetts Institute of Technology teaching and writing book; 1906 at Central Constancia, Porto Rico; 1907 at Central Cortada, Porto Rico; 1908-09 at Central Aguirre, Porto Rico, during the winter months, teaching at the Institute of Technology during the first ten weeks of the term. Altogether, in Cuba and Porto Rico, I have had the complete charge of manufacturing about fifty-five thousand tons of sugar and the chemical control of nearly seventy thousand tons. The 'Sugar Laboratory' of the institute has graduated four chief chemists for prominent refineries, and has about fifteen graduates at present holding important positions in the sugar industry of Cuba, Porto Rico, Louisiana, and Hawaii." Is a member of the American Chemical Society and an Assoc. de Chimistes de Sue. et Dist. (Paris), Boston Authors' Club, and other organizations. In 1909 he was one of the committee of three from the United States on "Starch" for the Congress of Applied Chemistry at London.

THEOPHILUS HUNTINGTON ROOT

SON of OLIVER DEAN ROOT, M.D., 1854, and MARY ELIZABETH (WHITE) ROOT. Was born at Whately, Massachusetts, October 12, 1861. Entered college in July, 1881, from Framingham High School.

Root taught school at the Rolfe Grammar School in Memphis, Tennessee, and then entered the Union Theological Seminary, New York. This seminary he deserted at the end of one year to go to Yale Divinity School, where he graduated in May, 1890. He completed his theological studies with one more year at Harvard, as a graduate student in the Divinity School. Before this he had begun to preach in Presbyterian and Congregational churches, especially in the summer vacations, when he was often in charge of churches. In 1892 he accepted a position as tutor in New Testament Literature at the University of Chicago. Ill health forced him to give up in 1894, and he spent the next six years in recovering it. Residence in New Orleans and Cincinnati, followed by out-of-doors life in western Massachusetts, brought back a fair measure of strength. In 1900 he was strong enough to take the rural parish at Wood River Junction, Rhode Island, where he has remained, gaining in health and serving well his people. In the spring of this year the horse which he was driving ran away, and in the upset which followed his mother, who had been his devoted companion through all his illness, was instantly killed, and Root was considerably injured.

WILLIAM NOBLE ROUNDY

SON of DANIEL CURTIS and JANE ELIZABETH (YOUNG) ROUNDY. Was born at Geneva, Wisconsin, June 23, 1861.

WILLIAM NOBLE ROUNDY

EDWARD TERRY SANFORD

Entered college in September, 1882. Joined our Class as a junior, from Class of '86.

Upon leaving Cambridge after graduation he engaged in business for a time at Chicago. But he soon became interested in literary work, and that mostly has been his vocation ever since. He has travelled considerably and has published two volumes of verses. His home has usually been in or near Chicago. He writes: "To quote from a poem by James Whitcomb Riley, — 'Nothin' to say, my daughter, nothin' at all to say.'"

EDWARD TERRY SANFORD

SON OF EDWARD JACKSON and EMMA (CHAVANNES) SANFORD. Was born at Knoxville, Tennessee, July 23, 1865. Entered college in October, 1883, as a junior, from University of Tennessee.

"The year after graduating I spent in Europe — travelling principally and studying incidentally — with Bartlett, Carpenter, Hansen, and MacArthur. In August, 1886, I returned and entered the Harvard Law School, graduating in 1889, with degrees of LL.B. and A.M. After graduating I returned to my home in Knoxville, Tennessee, and at once entered upon the general practice of the law, being at first a member of the firm of Andrews, Thornburgh & Sanford. The firm was changed from time to time by death and retirement of members, and the taking in of new members, becoming in 1899 the firm of Lucky, Sanford & Fowler, as a member of which I continued in active practice until January, 1907, when I was appointed by President Roosevelt an Assistant Attorney-General of the United States, and removed to Washington, District of Columbia, remaining there until June, 1908, when, having been appointed by President Roosevelt United States District Judge for the Eastern and Middle Districts of Tennessee, I returned to Knoxville, and entered upon the discharge of the duties of that office, which I now hold. Before going to Washington I devoted a good deal of my time outside of my regular work to the duties of trustee of the University of Tennessee and other public institutions, and frequently delivered public addresses, generally of a historical or educational character; but, since going upon the bench, have, for lack of time, been compelled to give up the latter almost entirely. Practically my only recreation now is an occasional game of golf. My health is good, however, and my interest in my life work deep and abiding." He is also the first president of the Board of Trustees of the George Peabody College for Teachers, a vice-president of the Harvard Law School Association, a trustee of the East Tennessee Institute, and a governor of the Knoxville Hospital. He has been president of the Bar Association of Tennessee, president of the Alumni Association of the University of Tennessee, and vice-president of the American Bar Association. He was made an LL.D. by the University of Cincinnati in 1908. In 1904 he was a candidate for the Republican nomination for governor of Tennessee and received the next to largest vote. He is a member of clubs in Washington, New York, Knoxville, Nashville, and Chattanooga. In 1889 he organized the Southern Club at Harvard, and was an editor of the Harvard Law Review.

CHARLES AUSTIN SAWIN

SON OF MOSES MORSE and SUSAN OLIVE (KENDALL) SAWIN. Was born at Cambridge, March 5, 1863. Entered college in July, 1881, from Cambridge High School.

"The twenty-five years since graduation have passed quickly and the few prominent events in my life can be told in a few words. In December, 1885, I entered the National Bank of Redemption and after a few years was made discount clerk, which position I held at the time of the consolidation with the Shoe and Leather National Bank in 1901 and the First National Bank in 1904. In January, 1907, I was appointed assistant cashier of the latter bank. In the spring of that year the directors of the bank, two of whom were Boyden and Storrow, very generously gave me leave of absence to recover from a nervous breakdown. I went abroad with Mrs. Sawin and spent the summer in England and Scotland, returning to the bank in September. In April, 1908, I left the bank to go with the John L. Whiting & Son Co., brush manufacturers, which company consolidated with J. J. Adams & Co. in July, taking the name of John L. Whiting-J. J. Adams Co. I continued to live in Cambridge after graduating from college until my marriage in 1892, when I moved to Somerville, where I lived a little over two years. In June, 1895, I bought a house in Newton Centre and have lived there since that time."

ARTHUR BROWN SAWYER

Son of HENRY and MARY ELIZABETH (SOULE) SAWYER. Was born at Boston October 7, 1863. Entered college in July, 1881, from Chelsea High School, and under the tutorship of James Byrne.

"After leaving college in 1885 I started with Lynch Brothers, morocco manufacturers, of Beverly, Massachusetts. On October 7 I went as salesman with Phelps & Lombard, High Street, Boston, until May, 1890. I was in the leather commission business in Boston as sole agent for W. J. McClary until 1896, treasurer of the Sawyer Crystal Blue Co. in the interim. I left Boston in May, 1896, as western manager for L. Beebe & Sons of Boston, and R. H. Foerderer of Philadelphia, as western manager of their entire business in vici kid and other leather, with a store in Chicago. I resigned in 1901, filling a similar position with Dungan-Hood & Co. of Boston and Philadelphia, until December 1, 1904, when I started into the leather commission business under my own name, having the exclusive agency for leading eastern houses in the West. I am still engaged in the same business."

WILLIAM MUNRO SEAVEY

Son of WILLIAM HENRY and MARY LOUISA (MUNRO) SEAVEY. Was born at Fairmount, Massachusetts, March 29, 1862. Entered college in July, 1881, from Roxbury Latin School.

In college he had good friends in the Class, but his circle of intimates was small and he was not known as a club man. He roomed with Robinson, special, in Thayer. Among the first of the class to be married, he started out for a business career as a leather merchant of the firm of Mayo & Seavey in Boston. This venture was unsuccessful and after a short agency experience he returned to Harvard in 1889 as a member of the Law School, from which he graduated in 1892. Having passed his Suffolk Bar examinations a year before graduation, he at once opened an office in Boston and continued to practise until the illness which resulted in his death at Boston July 22, 1902. The most permanent fruits of these years were two legal works entitled "A Manual for Notaries Public and Justices of the Peace" and "The Powers, Duties, and Liabilities of Towns and Town Officers in Massachusetts." Several years before his death he was thrown from his wheel, and three years later an affection of the brain set in. Unnoticed at first by his friends it grew until it was too late to remedy it. He suffered intensely as the end drew near. He bore the affliction with fortitude and resolution, and while he lost his interest in his work yet his memory and affection for old college friends and associations remained clear to the end.

See Report VI., page 83.

ARTHUR WESLEY SIM

SON OF PETER and MARY JANE (STEELE) SIM. Was born at Peabody, Massachusetts, December 21, 1859. Joined our Class as a senior, having been a special student in 1883-84.

"After ending my term at the Harvard Law School on account of a serious sickness, I devoted a year or two to the recovery of my health. About that time I entered the office of Hon. Peleg W. Chandler in Boston. Here the main benefit derived was my delightful associations with other members of that office, especially Winfield S. Hutchinson, now of the Bell Telephone Co. More strenuous work began to tell on my health and I was advised by my physician to take it a little easier, and not work so hard. I then, on his further suggestion, opened an office for the practice of law in the town of Pepperell, Massachusetts. Here I spent a pleasant time for about six months, when I returned to my home and opened an office in Salem, Massachusetts. My main office at the present time is at Peabody, and I have desk room at Salem. Since last August I have been putting in considerable time serving on a Committee of Investigation appointed to investigate the town in all its departments. This has taken considerable time, and the report was largely written and compiled by me. While thus engaged I was elected president of the Board of Trustees of the Peabody Institute. My term of service expires next year. Although not in the heat of active affairs, unfortunately, I am still an intensely interested observer of men and affairs. 'They also serve who only stand and wait.' " He served a term in the Massachusetts House of Representatives.

*ROBERT FIELDS SIMES

Son of JAMES THOMAS and MARY CHASE (LIBBEY) SIMES. Was born at Brooklyn, New York, October 31, 1864. Entered college in July, 1881, from St. Mark's School.

Of New Hampshire stock, he grew to boyhood in his grandfather's home at Portsmouth. In college he was fond of reading and of athletic sports. In junior year he was one of our champion '85, tug-of-war team, and he had had a try at track athletics and football. His three years at the Harvard Law School brought him, without much apparent study, an A.M. with his LL.B. After the usual experience in a Boston law office, he and Trask started out as partners in 1889. Later for a short time there was an enlargement of the firm, and after that he practised alone until his death in 1901. In the war of 1898 his Portsmouth blood showed itself, and he took and passed the examinations to become an ensign in the United States Navy; but, as he wrote: "The battle of Santiago came soon after and practically ended the war, and I saw no service." After his death his friends raised a fund in his memory, the income to be used for the perpetual yearly purchase of books for the library of the Harvard Union.

*JOHN SIMPKINS

SON of JOHN and RUTH BARKER (SEARS) SIMPKINS. Was born at New Bedford, June 27, 1862. Entered college in July, 1880, from St. Mark's School.

He was a well-known figure in college life, a member of the D. K. E., Institute of 1770, Alpha Delta Phi, Hasty Pudding, A. D., and other clubs. He played on the Freshman Eleven, and on the University Eleven in our senior year. Mention of the Simpkins Metallurgical Laboratory, the Simpkins Assay Laboratory, and the Simpkins Ore-Dressing Laboratory fitted up as a memorial to him by members of his family is made in Report VI., at page 86. After graduation and while living in Boston he took some additional courses in college in political economy and kindred subjects. He early took an interest in public affairs and soon after leaving college found an opportunity for usefulness in this direction. He became State senator from "the Cape" in 1891, and was reelected in 1892. In 1892 he was also a Republican presidential elector, and in that same year he received the honor of being chosen the second president of the Republican Club of Massachusetts. In 1894 he was elected to the Fifty-third Congress, and in 1896 was reelected by his constituents to the Fifty-fourth Congress. He died in Washington during his second term of office after a brief illness, on March 26, 1897. Just before he died he had been selected by his associates as the representative of Massachusetts on the National Republican Committee. John Simpkins had all the temptations to pursue a life of ease and lack of usefulness furnished by wealth and good social position, but in the pursuit of an honorable political ambition he labored indefatigably from the time of his graduation until the day of his death. He was truly a Cape Cod man, where his family had been residents since 1639. He was interested in all local matters in and about Yarmouth. He had been a member of the school committee of that town and president of the Barnstable County Agricultural Society. Yarmouth was his home. He was a member of the Somerset and Country Clubs of Boston and of the University and Union League Clubs of New York.

HENRY WILLIAMS SIMPSON

SON OF FRANCIS CAREY and EMMELINE (COXEY) SIMPSON. Was born at Wilmington, Delaware, December 15, 1865. Entered college in October, 1882, as a sophomore, under the tutorship of W. G. Nowell.

Studied law at Columbia Law School and in law offices in New York. Was admitted to the New York bar in 1887. Has continued to practise his profession there, for the latter part of the time as a member of the firm of Smith & Simpson. Up to 1899 his home was in that city. He then moved to New Rochelle, then four years later to Larchmont, and in 1907 to Port Chester, New York.

ALFRED PERCIVAL SMITH

SON OF ALFRED and CORNELIA STANLEY (ALLEN) SMITH. Was born at Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, July 11, 1863. Entered college in October, 1884, as a senior, from Haverford College.

The year following graduation was occupied with post-graduate work. In 1886 he entered the law offices of the Hon. Wayne MacVeagh and George Tucker Bispham, Esq., Philadelphia, and at the same time he matriculated in the Law Department of the University of Pennsylvania. He graduated with his class in June, 1888, was admitted to the Bar, and March 31, 1891, he was admitted to the United States Courts. Since 1888 he has been engaged actively in the practice of his profession,—largely an office practice, connected with real estate, the settlement of estates, and some corporate matters. From choice he has never had an associate nor a partner. He was for a time a solicitor for the Presbyterian Historical Society. He has been a public-spirited and generous citizen. He has given to Haverford College, his first Alma Mater, the Haverford Union Building, which is intended to house all the common interests, which at Harvard are housed in both the Harvard Union and Phillips Brooks House. Of course, the Haverford Union Building is on a smaller scale, proportioned to the needs of a smaller college. He has also founded a combination scholarship for graduate study by Haverford men at Harvard. He was ordained a ruling elder in the Arch Street Presbyterian Church, where he serves as sessional treasurer, and is also a member of the Provisional Session of the First Italian Presbyterian Church of Philadelphia. He was for some years a Sunday-school superintendent. He was early in his career actively interested in the Law Academy of Philadelphia. He is a member of the Law Association of Philadelphia, and has been for a number of years a member of its Legal Biography Committee. He was one of the charter members of the Pennsylvania Bar Association, and secretary of its Legal Biography Committee, when, in connection with its work, the first Law Museum in the United States was established in the Law School Building, February 4, 1901. He is also a member of the American Bar Association, and attended the Universal Congress of Lawyers and Jurists held in St. Louis, Missouri, in 1904, as a delegate at large. He has never been active in politics. He has served as the treasurer of the Rudolph Blankenburg Club almost from its inception to date. He has been an industrious collector of books, plans, pictures, historical data, and portraits, relating mostly to the early English history, and later Pennsylvania history, of the law courts. He is possessed of a keen interest also in genealogy, history, and numismatics; is particularly interested in Lutheran, Presbyterian, and Reformed Church history. He has contributed a few articles to newspapers and religious magazines; is a life member of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania, also a life member of the Genealogical Society of Pennsylvania, and the Presbyterian Historical Society, being a member of its Executive Council, and curator in charge of the Society's Museum. He also belongs to many other societies.

EDWARD IRVING SMITH

EDWARD IRVING SMITH

SON OF CYRUS GROSVENOR and EMILY MARIA (HUDDLESTON) SMITH. Was born at Lincoln, October 20, 1862. Entered college in October, 1881, from Lincoln High School.

After a year of private tutoring in New Jersey, he took the Harvard Law School course, and an A.M. and LL.B. in 1889. He opened an office in Waltham, and a little later one in Boston also. With a short exception near the start his firm of Smith & Ludden continued for nearly fifteen years with considerable success. In 1894 he ran for mayor of Waltham as a Democrat, reducing the usual Republican majority of six hundred to one hundred and five. He also ran for state senator. He was a special justice of the Second District Court of Middlesex held at Waltham from 1893, and has been a member of the Waltham Board of Health. For the last few years he has not been very active. He is living in Lincoln.

WILLIAM CHRISTOPHER SMITH

SON OF CHRISTOPHER and SALLY TAYLOR (HAWES) SMITH. Was born at Chatham, Massachusetts, September 16, 1861. Entered college in July, 1881, from Phillips Exeter Academy.

" My life since graduation has been one of rather striking ups and downs, and of comparatively small performance. A weak plant will not thrive in the best of soil, nor will a hardy one survive the desert. Whether the plant or the soil in which it was planted is responsible for the small fruitage in my case I will not attempt to state, but I have my own opinion. After graduation I was employed for about six months as assistant editor of a weekly paper in Lowell, at the end of which time the proprietor's purse having collapsed, I quitted and entered the Harvard Law School. At the end of a year and a half I took the Suffolk Bar examination and entered the Bar. I began practice in the office of James R. Carret, Esq., of Boston, a Harvard graduate, where I remained the greater part of the time for eight or nine years. I had emerged from the routine of conveyancing work, had argued several cases before the State Supreme Court, and had good, but not brilliant, prospects in sight when my health failed. After a rest of two or three years I returned to the profession for a couple of years, and again later for another two years, but more recently I have not attempted steady office application. I have, however, done some legal work, have made a few short addresses, and have written a history of my native town, Part I of which has recently been published. At an earlier period I was a regular contributor to 'Appleton's Annual Cyclopædia.' By some hooks or crooks I have got my record into 'Who's Who in New England,' and some similar publications. In reviewing the period as a whole, however, I feel that I have been cheated out of doing much that I intended to do, have been thwarted, opposed, and hindered in nearly all my ambitions and hopes, have had the cheapness of some portions of the human race revealed in full measure, and can dismiss the whole period in one phrase, — 'good riddance, bad rubbish.' I have a son sixteen years of age in Dean Academy and a daughter twelve years of age, not yet old enough for academy life." He founded and was first president of the Chatham High School Association.

*WILLIAM WHARTON SMITH

SON OF BENJAMIN RAPER and ESTHER FISHER (WHARTON) SMITH. Was born at Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, August 29, 1861. Entered college in July, 1881, from Phillips Andover Academy.

Coming to Harvard a little older than many of us, he was perhaps the better prepared on that account. In his four years he did good work, preferring the general subjects, that should be part of every liberal education, to those which might be regarded as more closely bearing upon his future profession, the law. He had a lively interest in athletics but did not attain a prominent place in them. He was a member of the Institute of 1770 and of the Hasty Pudding Club. His summers were always spent at Newport, practically in his boat, for he was passionately fond of the water. After leaving college he graduated LL.B. from the University of Pennsylvania in 1888, winning the Sharswood prize for the best essay by a member of the senior class. He was at once admitted to the bar, and had begun to taste professional success at the time of his early death. He was the president of the Law Academy of Philadelphia. In other fields of usefulness he was interested in the St. Mary's Street Carpenter Shop for boys, in the Forestry Association, and the City Parks Association. In short he was a high-minded, public-spirited citizen, whose loss, young as he was, Philadelphians mourned. It was his boat that he loved so well which caused his death. Being on from Philadelphia for the "Fourth," he planned a trip around Newport Island for the previous day, July 3, 1892. The day was a bad one, with a stiff breeze and a heavy sea running. But Smith was a good sailor and he went accompanied by a younger brother and a friend. The boat was swamped a mile off shore in a tide rip, and our classmate and his friend, cumbered with heavy oilskins, were drowned. His brother, after a hard fight, reached land. While being by right of inheritance a man of strong, resolute character, he possessed, to those who had once penetrated his reserve, a capacity of good fellowship, and a sympathetic sincerity that endeared him to all who knew him well; while to the highest ideals he united a faculty for sturdy, faithful work, which, but for his untimely death, would surely in time have enabled him to rise very high in his profession.

See Report III., page 56.

GEORGE ANDREW SNOW

SON OF ISAAC RUSSELL and KATHERINE THERESA (HADLEY) SNOW. Was born at Boston, November 5, 1863. Entered college in July, 1881, from Somerville High School.

"Nothing out of the ordinary worth recording." He essayed first the banking and brokerage business in Boston, but for many years has been in the general insurance business, living first in Cambridge, later in Somerville, and now in Malden.

MALCOLM STORER

SON of HORATIO ROBINSON STORER, A.B., 1850; A.M.: M.D., 1853; LL.B., 1868, and EMILY ELVIRA (GILMORE) STORER. Was born at Milton, Massachusetts, April 26, 1862. Entered college in July, 1881, under the tutorship of Rev. William S. Child.

He received his medical degree from Harvard and afterward studied in Vienna. He writes of himself: "The life of a physician does not present features of very absorbing general interest, fascinating though the work may be to the person most intimately concerned. Boston, in winter, with plenty of hospital work, and a modicum of private practice, and summer at Islesford, Maine, render existence not entirely unattractive. I find in the proper medical care of the sick poor many problems arising that repay much thought and study. My interest in Numismatics still continues and the care of the constantly increasing collection of Medical Medals presented to the Boston Medical Library by my father, of my own collection of Naval Medals, and of the collections of Harvard, for which gifts of coins, medals, or current money are respectfully solicited from classmates, demand a certain amount of time very pleasantly spent. After all, perhaps I find as much interest in watching the mental and moral development of a certain young person at five, as in anything else." He is president of the Boston Obstetrical Society, the North End Diet Kitchen, and of the staff of the Boston Dispensary. He is an assistant in Gynecology at the Harvard Medical School and Gynecologist to St. Elizabeth's Hospital. Also a member of the St. Botolph Club.

JAMES JACKSON STORROW

SON of JAMES JACKSON STORROW, A.B., 1857, and ANNE MARIA (PERRY) STORROW. Was born at Boston, January 19, 1864. Entered college in July, 1881, from G. W. C. Noble's Private School.

row. Continued as a member practising law for eleven years. Then became a member of the banking firm of Lee, Higginson & Co. Took some interest in the creation of the Charles River Embankment, occupying some of my spare time for a couple of years. Then some leisure time as a member of the Boston School Committee; then a year reorganizing that committee by Act of Legislature; then three years as chairman of the reorganized Board. During this time became vice-president of the Boston Chamber of Commerce and president of the Merchants' Association; then spent my spare time for a year largely on the Chamber of Commerce as its president. This body consolidating with several other merchants' organizations became the largest, or one of the largest, in the country. Then resigned, and devoted some leisure moments to running as an unsuccessful candidate for a municipal office. Director in various corporations." The above brief statement gives but an inadequate idea of Storrow's activities in his "leisure" (?), especially during the last few years. As an interested Harvard man he represented the college for five years in the agreement to settle all disputes with Yale, and in 1902 was one of the committee to draft the new five-year agreement. He has served also on the committee for the regulation of athletic sports, gave a course of lectures at the Law School in 1899, and at the Graduate School of Business in 1909. He has also aided in coaching the crews, and has served on a committee to interest Harvard students in political life. He has been a trustee of the Harvard Union since 1903. He has served two terms on the Board of Overseers, and was one of the Committee of Overseers to notify President Lowell of his election. He has taken a special interest in scientific and metallurgical instruction, and has served on the Committee on Engineering and Education. He was one of the organizers of the Harvard Club of Boston and has recently been elected chief marshal for the 1910 Commencement. On educational lines, while a member of the School Committee, he developed the so-called "Storrow Idea," for the use of schoolhouses, out of school hours, as centres of civic activity. He has been secretary of the Franklin Fund and the Franklin Institute. He has delivered numerous addresses to teachers and educational bodies. As a public-spirited citizen he has been the chairman of committees to raise funds for the California earthquake sufferers, the Chelsea fire sufferers, the Messina earthquake sufferers, to bring the Porto Rico teachers to Harvard, and to properly entertain the National Educational Association. Interested in charities, he bought and equipped the West End House as a neighborhood centre for boys, and was one of the creators, and is treasurer of the Newsboys' Club in another part of Boston. For a side light on his run for mayor of Boston see the sketch of Nutter's life.

*ABNER ERNEST STRONG

SON OF ABNER DINSMORE and ANNA MARIA (CLAFLIN) STRONG. Was born at Ashtabula, Ohio, October 5, 1861. Entered college in October, 1881, having prepared himself.

Before he had planned to come to Harvard President Garfield, then a congressman from Ohio, attracted by his ability, nominated him for a cadetship at West Point. He was unable to go, however. In college he devoted himself to the classics and mathematics and took honors in both subjects. He was one of the first men taken on the Phi Beta Kappa and received his degree summa cum laude. He was more than a thorough and able student. He was fond of athletics, and a genial and stimulating companion, who made friends easily. As president of the Society of Christian Brethren for nearly two years, he exercised a powerful influence for good among his fellows, for his was a character firm in its sense of right and loyalty to Christian truth. After graduation he took up teaching, first at Groton Academy and later in the Boston Latin School. In each case the sickness, consumption, which so early made him our first loss after graduation, cut short his efforts. He died at his home in Ashtabula, January 5, 1887. It can truly be said that his very ambition, zeal, enthusiasm, and earnestness were his undoing. He worked beyond his strength and disease entered into his enfeebled body. Struggle as he would he could not stay its advance, and there only remained the opportunity to show how fortitude and character can triumph over disease.

See Report II., page 49.

CHARLES AUGUSTUS STRONG

SON OF AUGUSTUS HOPKINS and HARRIET LOUISE (SAVAGE) STRONG. Was born at Haverhill, Massachusetts, November 28, 1862. Entered college in October, 1884, as a senior from University of Rochester.

"Studied theology, Rochester, New York, one year; abroad on Harvard Fellowship, Berlin, Paris, Oxford, etc., one year; then instructor in philosophy in Cornell University, September, 1887. After teaching logic and psychology at Cornell for nearly two years, I was married and went abroad, studying a semester each in Paris, Berlin, and Freiburg in Baden. On returning to this country, I was appointed Docent at Clark University, but was obliged to drop work in the middle of the year on account of ill health. Then resided in New York City, and next undertook the duties of an associate professorship in psychology at the University of Chicago." He has been a lecturer and professor of psychology at Columbia University since 1896, but while still connected with Columbia his time has been mainly devoted to writing on philosophy. The magnum opus of which he prophesied in an earlier report was published in 1903, — "Why the Mind has a Body." Much of his time has been spent abroad during the past few years.

EBEN SUTTON

SON OF EBEN and MARY (HASBROOK) SUTTON. Was born at New York City, February 17, 1865. Entered college in July, 1881, under the tutorship of Lawrence Bond.

"Soon after graduating I started my business career, which has really been divided into three chapters. I first went to work with my father in the woollen manufacturing business in North Andover. For three years I was connected with the Sutton Mills, and then for seven years I was agent for the North Andover Mills. This ended my first chapter as well as my connection with the woollen business. In 1894 I formed a partnership with Mr. James W. Bowen, and until October 1, 1900, the firm of Sutton & Bowen were in the stock brokerage business in Boston. I then withdrew from the firm and all active business and for the following year travelled in Africa and Europe. On my return to America I settled in Baltimore, where I have been ever since. In April, 1902, I once more started to work. This time in the bond business with Mr. John G. Brogden, forming the firm of Sutton & Brogden. On April 1, 1903, Mr. T. Nelson Strother joined us and the firm became Sutton, Strother & Co., which is still in existence." His offices were burned out by the great Baltimore fire, but with no other loss than the office furniture. He is one of the Board of Governors of the Baltimore Stock Exchange, and a member of the Baltimore Merchants, Baltimore Country, and other clubs in that city.

HENRY KIRKLAND SWINSCOE

SON OF CHARLES and MARY WILLIAMS (SANGER) SWINSCOE. Was born at Detroit, Michigan, November 18, 1861. Entered college in July, 1881, from Cambridge High School.

"I started work with the Clinton Wire Cloth Co. in 1885 in the operating department. When I resigned in 1900 I was and had been for some time superintendent of their factory. During my work with them I gave considerable attention to improvements in manufacturing so as to reduce the cost, and took out several patents. In 1900 I moved to Philadelphia to become superintendent of Harrison Brothers & Co., but resigned after one year to take employment with The American Steel and Wire Co. in their Chicago district. In 1902 I was transferred to the wire rope department of that company at Worcester, Massachusetts, and in 1903 transferred to their San Francisco works. In 1904 I was transferred back to Worcester as assistant superintendent of the South Works, so called. In December of the same year I was made superintendent of their electric cable works in Worcester, and in 1909 changed back to assistant superintendent of the South Works. I cannot complain of monotony. So much for work. My relaxation in the summer time is to go to a small town in New Hampshire. In winter books and people, people and books, occupy my otherwise idle hours. I no longer am a player, as I have given up the Footlight Club, lacking the necessary time and nerve to play elsewhere. Taking it by and large life has been and is well worth while and I have not yet reached the point where I can hear the sound of the curfew tolling." He is a member of the Worcester Club.

ALFRED WILLIAM TAUSSIG

Son of JAMES and MAGDALENE (DORMITZER) TAUSSIG. Was born at St. Louis, Missouri, June 18, 1862. Entered college in October, 1881, from Phillips Exeter Academy.

"After graduating I went to my home in St. Louis and engaged in the mining business, which involved numerous trips to Arizona, Montana, and other western states. In 1889 I moved to Duluth, Minnesota, where I took up the real estate and investment business, in which I am still engaged under the firm name of A. W. Taussig & Co. In 1889 the first discovery of iron ore on the Mesaba Range, eighty miles north of Duluth, was made. This range now contains the main ore deposits owned by the United States Steel Corporation, estimated at practically one billion tons. Retaining my interest in mining, the development of such vast iron deposits practically at our door, together with the development of copper mines in Michigan, Montana, and Arizona added excitement and zest to the usual ordinary business career. In 1899 we organized the first Golf and Country Club in Duluth, with twenty members. To-day we have a membership of over four hundred, and to any of my classmates who may pay me a visit I can promise an interesting day over one of the sportiest links in the country." He is a member of the Kitchi Gammi and other clubs of Duluth.

FREDERICK SPAULDING TAYLOR

SON of WILLIAM OLIVER and MARY MORSE (BARKER) TAYLOR. Was born at Boston, January 8, 1863. Entered college in July, 1881, from G. W. C. Noble's Private School.

"After graduation I took a year's course in architecture in the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, followed by work as an architectural draughtsman and in a stock broker's office in Boston for several years. Then I travelled in Europe for some time, and since my return I have lived in the Adirondacks." He is a member of the Somerset Club of Boston.

EDWARD CLAFLIN THAYER

SON of THOMAS BIGELOW and JOSEPHINE BRAGG (CLAF-LIN) THAYER. Was born at Cincinnati, Ohio, January 18, 1864. Entered college in July, 1881, from Milford High School, and under the tutorship of H. W. Lull.

"Since graduation I have been continuously in the whole-sale shoe business at the same address; first in the employ of my grandfather, Aaron Claflin, and since his death in 1890 as a member of the firm of Claflin, Thayer & Co. of New York City. I have not accumulated wealth, but have made a living." He has been the treasurer and president of the Middle States Shoe Wholesalers' and Manufacturers' Protective Association.

ERNEST LAWRENCE THAYER

SON of EDWARD DAVIS and ELLEN MARIA (DARLING) THAYER. Was born at Lawrence, August 14, 1863. Entered college in July, 1881, from Worcester High School.

"Immediately after leaving college I spent a year abroad, then went to San Francisco to join the staff of Hearst's Examiner. I wrote for this paper in various capacities till the winter of 1888, when, my health failing, I returned to Worcester, my home. For the following eight years I remained in Worcester, engaging in a desultory way in the woollen business. In 1892 my health broke down completely, and since then my main concern has been to get it back again. By virtue of an unshakable optimism I have pretty well succeeded in doing so. In 1902 I began to take enough interest in life to find pleasure in foreign travel, and since then I have lived a good deal abroad. The prospect now seems excellent for a serene, if useless, old age." As the author of "Casey at the Bat," Thayer made a contribution of permanent value to English literature. The unwarranted claims by various individuals to its authorship were completely disposed of as the result of investigations conducted by Boyden a year or two ago.

JOHN ELIOT THAYER

SON of NATHANIEL THAYER, A.M. (Hon.), 1866, and CORNELLIA (VAN RENSSELAER) THAYER. Was born at Boston, April 3, 1862. Entered college in July, 1881, under the tutorship of Charles W. Stone.

"After graduation I married and settled down at Lancaster, where I raised a family and many animals. I soon became greatly interested in birds and made a study of Ornithology. As my collection grew very fast I had to build a museum. It now contains as fine a collection of mounted North American birds as there is in the world. My son graduates from Harvard this year, just twenty-five years after his sire." The following list copied from the qualifications for overseer sent out this year by the nominating committee of the alumni gives a partial idea of John Thayer's public service record: "Business and other interests: president First National Bank of Clinton, Clinton Savings Bank, Worcester East Agricultural Society; member Standing Committee First Parish Church of Lancaster; member Standing Committee First Parish Church of Boston; member Massachusetts Society for Promoting Agriculture; director New England Forest, Fish, and Game Association; vice-president National Audubon Society; member American Ornithological Union, Nuttall Ornithological Club, and Boston Zoölogy Society. Public record: chairman Board of Selectmen, Lancaster, Massachusetts; member Staff of Gov. William E. Russell of Massachusetts; trustee Lancaster Public Library. Offices held in Harvard University: First Marshal at graduation, 1885; member committee to visit the Arnold Arboretum, the Gray Herbarium, and the Museum of Comparative Zoölogy; member committees on Zoölogy and Forestry. Special qualifications: valuable work accomplished in the advancement of science, education, and civic improvement; of high authority on the subject of ornithology from the result of whose researches the university has directly benefited by the acquisition of a notable collection of bird specimens; unremitting interest since graduation in Harvard matters generally." It was John E. Thayer who put the Harvard Quarterly Journal of Economics on its feet by a timely endowment of fifteen thousand dollars soon after graduation. In connection with his ornithological studies he has paid the expenses of several scientific expeditions to the Gorgona Islands, Wrangel Island, to Mexico, to China and elsewhere, and most of the specimens so collected have been donated by him to the University Museum.

WILLIAM SYDNEY THAYER

SON OF JAMES BRADLEY THAYER, A.B., 1852; LL.B., 1856; Royall and later Weld Professor of Law, and SOPHIA BRADFORD (RIPLEY) THAYER. Was born at Milton, June 23, 1863. Entered college in July, 1881, from Cambridge High School.

"After three years at the Medical School and a term of one year as house pupil at the Massachusetts General Hospital, I spent the year 1889-90 in Berlin and Vienna in medical study. On returning to America I was appointed district physician at the Boston Dispensary, and practised medicine for somewhat less than a month at 84 Charles St., Boston. Having been offered a position as one of the assistant resident physicians in the Johns Hopkins Hospital, I moved to Baltimore in 1890. From October, 1891, to the fall of 1898 I was resident physician at this hospital. In 1895 I was appointed associate in medicine; in 1896, associate professor of medicine, and in 1905, professor of clinical medicine in Johns Hopkins University. In 1893 the months of October, November, and December were spent in study in Paris. In 1894, 1895, and 1896 my vacations were spent in trips to and from Europe, with a few weeks in Paris and London. In 1899 I made a short trip to Italy in order to investigate the Italian work on the transmission of malaria by mosquitoes. From 1898, when I left the hospital, until 1901 I lived at 3 West Franklin St. with Dr. Henry Barton Jacobs, '83, doing a consulting practice. On leaving the hospital I was made one of the heads of the Medical Department of the Johns Hopkins Dispensary and associate in medicine in the hospital. Since 1905 I have been associate physician at the Johns Hopkins Hospital. In September, 1901, I was married to Miss Susan C. Read of Charleston, South Carolina. Since our marriage we have lived at 406 Cathedral Street, where I have done a consulting practice, endeavoring to give my mornings, as far as possible, to my teaching and to study. Most of our summers during this time have been spent in Maine and in Canada. Last summer Mrs. Thayer and I spent four months in Europe. During the last few years my studies have been more particularly in connection with diseases of the heart and blood vessels." William S. Thayer has made valuable contributions to medical science with his pen and upon the platform of medical gatherings. In 1908 he was the orator at the fifty-ninth annual session of the American Medical Association at Chicago. The list of his medical society memberships is a long one. Among them are the Therapeutical Society of Moscow, Association of American Physicians, and corresponding member of the Budapest Royal Society of Physicians. He has been president of the Tuberculosis Commission of Maryland, a vice-president of the Medical Society of Therapeutical Medicine, and one of the board of editors of the Archives, Internal Medicine, etc. He is a member of Alpha Chapter of Maryland of Phi Beta Kappa, and has been president of the Harvard Club of Maryland.

*EDWARD JAMES TILTON

Son of JAMES SEAVEY and REBECCA ABBIE (HOBBS) TILTON. Was born at North Hampton, New Hampshire, June 20, 1859. Entered college in July, 1878, from Phillips Andover Academy.

He was at first a member of the Class of '83, but the ill health with which he had a life-long struggle interrupted his college work, and after enforced vacations he joined the Class of '85 at the beginning of the sophomore year in 1882. After graduation he devoted himself to medicine, pursuing, with some interruptions, the courses of the Harvard Medical School. He availed himself also of hospital residence and practice, and travelled abroad with a private patient, thus helping to prepare himself for his profession. He was married June 30, 1889, to Miss Mary Azuba Wheeler of Concord, Massachusetts, and in 1893 established himself in Newton Centre, Massachusetts, where he won recognition at once as a skilful practitioner. In April, 1895, he was forced to relinquish practice. After more than a year of the best medical treatment, and the assiduous attentions of his nearest friends, he died of anemia at Andover, Massachusetts, April 17, 1896.

See Report IV., page 54.

He studied at the Harvard Law School, and received his LL.B. in 1888, and in the same year was admitted to the Suffolk Bar. He spent the next year in the law office of Shattuck & Munroe of Boston, and then he and Simes, '85, opened an office of their own. In 1893 the firm was enlarged and became Bumpus, Trask, Simes & Adams. Since Simes' death he has practised alone. For some years his avocation was a farm at Lincoln, but he gave it up a short time ago. He is a director of the Peter B. Brigham Hospital, a trustee of the Hanover Street Trust, treasurer of the Nahant Land Co., treasurer of the Military Historical Society of Massachusetts, etc. He is a member of the Somerset Club.

*GEORGE SIDNEY TYLOR

Son of ALBERT OSRO and EMILY (MURDOCK) TYLOR. Was born at Avondale, Ohio, August 15, 1863. Entered college in July, 1881, under the tutorship of Joseph White.

Tylor had previously taken the entrance examination for the Harvard Law School. In college he was a good student, took a moderate interest in athletics, was fond of books, of nature, and of his particular circle of friends. He was a member of the Everett Athenæum, the Bicycle Club, and the Lacrosse Association. Freshman year he roomed alone on Dunster Street, sophomore year with Reis in Matthews 36. The last two years he made his home near the college with his mother and sister, who had come on to be with him. After graduation he returned to Cincinnati, took the law course at the University of Cincinnati, LL.B. '86, and opened an office. But a severe sickness broke his health and compelled rest. A long search for health followed. Accompanied by his mother, he tried the South, Colorado, and California without avail. Last of all they went to Honolulu, where he died of consumption April 12, 1891. His life was uneventful but he had shown characteristics which endeared him to his family and friends and made them feel the void caused by his early death.

See Report III., page 62.

FRANK LOUIS VAN CLEEF

Granted degree Ph.D. in Classics and Sanskrit by Bonn University in 1890, magna cum laude. After serving as private tutor at Cambridge for one year, in 1891 was called as professor of Greek to the University of Wisconsin, from which I resigned in 1894, assuming the professorship at Cornell Uni-

"Immediately after graduation, August 1, 1885, I entered the employ of Wadsworth, Howland & Co., Boston, Massachusetts, paint and varnish manufacturers, and was admitted to the firm on January 1, 1892. Soon after this tuberculosis developed and in the spring of 1894 I was obliged to give up active business. After leaving Cambridge in that year I spent some time in Wellesley Hills, the Adirondacks, and Colorado Springs, and finally came to Pasadena in February, 1896, where I expect to remain the rest of my life. I have gone into my old business in a small way here, at the same time retaining connection with the Boston house, and while all dreams of becoming a millionaire have long since vanished I am content. I was married on June 8, 1887, to Ella Frances Hilton, and we have four children, three girls and one boy, who has already taken 'preliminaries' for Harvard. We are all in good health, and altogether have good reason to be satisfied with the way the world has used us. Like many others, I have turned to golf in my old age." While still a resident of the East he served on the common council in Cambridge. He is now a trustee of Throop Polytechnic Institute of Pasadena, California, a Mason and Templar, and an officer in various commercial and literary organizations of Pasadena.

“My first year after graduation was spent in doing a small amount of teaching and in trying to get a good position as teacher. In the fall of 1886 I succeeded in getting a place in Cheltenham Academy, near Philadelphia. In 1887 I went to Peekskill Military Academy, where I taught for two years. In 1889 I entered the Harvard Law School, from which I graduated in 1892, having been admitted to the Suffolk Bar in the spring of that year. I spent the summer of 1892 in England and Europe, and soon after my return decided to give up the law and resume teaching. I taught at the Knapp Home School in Plymouth, Massachusetts, 1892-93, and in the fall of 1893 took a place in Milton Academy, Massachusetts, where I have taught ever since. Latin and Greek were my specialties at first, but since 1899 English has been my major subject. I was married in 1899 and went abroad for the summer on my wedding journey. In 1900 our first child, Margaret Henshaw, was born. She is the Class Baby of Smith College, '99, of which her mother was a member, and she received a handsome gift from the Class. The year 1902-03 we spent in England and Europe, it being my sabbatical. On November 21, 1902, in Berlin, Germany, our daughter, Faith, was born. In 1904 Elizabeth Walcott was born to us in Duxbury, Massachusetts. We spent the summer of 1906 in England and Europe. The summer of 1907 was spent in Temple, New Hampshire, where my wife translated 'Peter Moor's Journey to Southwest Africa' from the German of Frenssen. November 16, 1907, our boy, Andrew Henshaw, Jr., was born. My wife passed into the other world three weeks later." Ward is president of the Milton Education Society, vice-president of the Harvard Teachers' Association, a vestryman of St. Michael's Church, Milton, of which Roberts is the rector, and a member and officer of many organizations and clubs of a semi-public character.

"Have been engaged in the practice of law since 1888; since 1898 in New York City." The first few months after college were devoted to the study of political science, but after a few months he turned his attention to the law. While still a student at Cambridge he was awarded the Cobden Club prize medal for an essay, "How shall we reduce the Surplus Revenue?" In May, 1887, he went to Kansas City, was admitted to the Bar, and in 1888 formed one of the law partnership of Waters & Watson. In 1890 that partnership was dissolved. spent the next four years in study of those subjects in Europe. Most of this time was spent at the University of Berlin, where I was a student under the celebrated Helmholtz and Kundt, while between semesters I spent several weeks each at the universities of Paris and Stockholm. I also travelled in Italy, Austria, Denmark, and Sweden, and devoted a good deal of attention to languages. In 1890 I made my doctorate in philosophy at Berlin, and returned to this country. I had previously married, having met my wife in Berlin. My first child was born before I had secured a position, and I have been trying to support a family from that time to this. In September, 1890, I settled in Worcester as docent in the new Clark University, and was put in charge of the Department of Physics in 1892 as assistant professor. In 1900 I was made full professor, where I have remained. My life has been entirely devoted to scientific work, which I have thoroughly enjoyed. I come in contact only with advanced students, and have ample opportunity for my own researches. My life has been totally uneventful, unmarred by accidents or sadness. I have hardly been ill since leaving college, a result of the use of the gymnasium then and since, and the avoidance of athletic contests. My scientific work has been rewarded by election to the National Academy of Sciences, the American Philosophical Society, and the American Academy of Arts and Sciences in Boston. I am also a member of the American Physical Society, of which I was one of the founders, and the third president, the American Mathematical Society, the Deutsche Mathematiker-Vereinigung, and the Circolo Mathematico di Palermo. In 1905 I received the honorary degree of Doctor of Science at the semi-centennial of Tufts College, and in 1908 the degree of Doctor of Laws from Hobart College, where I delivered the Phi Beta Kappa oration. In Worcester I belong to the Worcester Club, of which I am vice-president, the Bohemians, the Tatnuck Country Club, the Twentieth Century Club, the Worcester Shakspere Club, of which I have been president, the Worcester Harvard Club, of which I have been vice-president, and the Worcester group of the Alliance Française, of which I have twice been president. I have been to Europe in the summers of 1891 and 1902. My oldest daughter is spending this year there, and my boy will be ready for Harvard this June. I am a frequent contributor to the papers. I have never run for public office."

secretary. He has been a member of Harvard and various other clubs in the several places in which he has resided.

ALBION OTIS WETHERBEE

He is a member of the Country Club and Exchange Club and a trustee of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library at Cohasset. His son Josiah graduates this year from Harvard.

FRANCIS WINTHROP WHITE

Son of FRANCIS ADAMS and CAROLINE (BARRETT) WHITE. Was born at Brookline, December 17, 1860. Entered college in July, 1880, from Boston Latin School.

"I went into business immediately after graduation and from early in 1886 until 1893 was stationed for periods ranging from a few months to several years in Savannah, Georgia, Cincinnati and Columbus, Ohio, St. Paul, Minnesota, Montreal, Province of Quebec, and Binghamton, New York. The greater part of this time was spent in Cincinnati, where, socially speaking, life was very agreeable, and many warm friendships were made. In 1893 I became treasurer of the company I had been connected with (the Warren-Scharf Asphalt Paving Co.) and returned to the head office in New York. In 1899 I became treasurer of the Warren-Burnham Co. of New York, a construction company, and of the Virginia Portland Cement Co.; in 1907 treasurer also of the Vulcan Portland Cement Co., Limited, of Montreal; and in 1908, in addition to the above, treasurer and secretary of the Colloseus Cement Co. of New York. Although I have always taken keen interest in the civic life of the communities in which I have lived and have tried to do my duty as a citizen, yet close application to business has been my lot to such an extent that a sketch of my career since that memorable day in June, 1885, when we went forth from Cambridge so full of hope, must be dry reading at best. Since 1895 I have lived in New Brighton on Staten Island, where the greatest happiness of my life — my marriage — took place, and where my three children were born. I have had two serious illnesses within the past eighteen years, — typhoid fever and pneumonia, — both of which were nearly fatal." He is a trustee of the Staten Island Academy, and is a member of the University and other clubs in New York and Staten Island.

McDONALD ELLIS WHITE

"In May, 1886, I entered the wool house of Brown and Williams (later Alexander Williams, Jr., & Co.), and was with them two years. After two months I was transferred to their Boston office and entered the Educational Department, then under the management of the late H. N. Wheeler, '71. I have been with this publishing house since that time, in 1901 taking charge of the retail department, and my life there has been on the whole a very happy one. Apart from my business, my chief interest before my marriage was with the First Corps of Cadets, M.V.M., with which organization I was connected for ten years. Since 1895 I have lived in Salem, and at one time or another have been connected with several private and public organizations. My summers have been spent at Hingham, Marblehead, Dark Harbor, Islesborough, Maine, and since 1907 at Scituate, in close and most pleasant association with Williams of our Class." He is a member of the Union Club of Boston, and has served on the Salem School Committee for six years, and been vice-president of the Salem Club.

JULIAN LINCOLN WHITESIDE

SON of JOHNSON and JULIA ANN (WHITAKER) WHITESIDE. Was born at Lowell, December 25, 1864. Entered college in July, 1881, from Lowell High School.

Then he was in the leather business on his own account until poor health compelled him to take a long three years' rest. In 1898 he became one of the force of "Bradstreets" at New York, where he has until recently been in charge of the Spanish and Portuguese correspondence. He makes his home on Staten Island.

EDSON LEONE WHITNEY

SON of FREDERIC PARKER and MARY WOOD (MERRIAM) WHITNEY. Was born at Gardner, Massachusetts, November 3, 1861. Entered college in July, 1881, from J. P. Hopkinson's Private School.

"On June, 1886, I was admitted to the Suffolk (Boston) Bar. In 1887 I graduated from the Boston University Law School, my early graduation being due to the fact that I had attended the first year courses of the Harvard Law School while a senior in college. In 1888 I received the degree of A.M. from Harvard, and in 1890 that of Ph.D. in the department of American History. During 1887-89 I was an assistant in history, and during the following year I held a graduate scholarship. From 1890-1903 I was engaged in teaching and literary work. I spent a year in Rochester, New York, and a year in Wisner, Nebraska, in public school teaching. I became successively professor of history and modern languages at Norwich University, Vermont, instructor in history at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, professor of political science and mathematics, and for one year acting president of Benzonia College, Michigan, docent in political science, University of Chicago, professor of political science and mathematics, Greer College, Illinois, and president of Lamar College, Missouri. While in Chicago I was editor of a monthly magazine, and at Lamar I was the educational editor of a monthly journal of literature and education. While at Benzonia I received the degree of Ped.B. from the normal department of Benzonia College. During the summer of 1902 I was director of a summer normal school in Missouri under state control. For the past seven years I have been an examiner in the Bureau of Pensions, Washington, District of Columbia, and have done more or less literary work and tutoring. During one year I gave a course of lectures in contracts at one of the local law schools." He has taken an interest in Congregational church matters. He is a member of several learned societies, among them the American Academy of Political and Social Science, the American Historical Association, the American Economic Association, and the Columbian Historical Society of Washington. He received a Bowdoin Prize in 1888 for an essay on "The Roman Senate under the Empire."

CHARLES ALEXANDER WHITTEMORE

SON of BENJAMIN BRUCE and MARTHA ELLEN (DICKINSON) WHITTEMORE. Was born at Cambridge, January 24, 1864. Entered college in July, 1881, from Cambridge High School.

"An uneventful narrative. The period since leaving Harvard has been spent in legal practice in Boston. I lived in my native city of Cambridge till the latter part of 1903, and since then in Lexington. Travels have not taken me farther south than Virginia, which I visited in 1888 on my wedding trip, or beyond Chicago on the west, or Mt. Desert on the east. My secondary occupation, that of church organist, which I continued for some time after graduation, has been almost entirely given up since I ceased playing at Christ Church, Cambridge, some years before leaving that city. In its place I now have the altogether subordinate but pleasant part of accompanying my children in their musical practice. Vacations, very short in the earlier years, have been for the greater part by the shore, — first at Annisquam (Gloucester), where I enjoyed the longer ones of boyhood, and afterwards a few seasons at Hull, and since 1899 on the Maine shore a little east of Castine. Not to be forgotten are brief holidays with and little journeys to the homes of '85 men, including Rolfe at Cape Cod and the Vineyard, Bacon at Choate Island, Greenman at Fitchburg, Watertown and in Maine; and a rather strenuous trip in the mountains with the present assistant bursar. Marriage and the birth of the children seem easily the most important events of the years now in review." He is one of the Board of Managers of the Gwynn Temporary Home for Children of Boston.

HENRY MORLAND WILLIAMS

SON of HENRY WILLARD WILLIAMS, M.D., 1849; A.M. (Hon.), 1868; Professor of Ophthalmology, and ELIZABETH ADELINE (LOW) WILLIAMS. Was born at Boston, September 19, 1862. Entered college in July, 1881, from Boston Latin School.

"After graduation I spent three years in the Harvard Law School and received the degree in 1888. Was one of the founders and the second treasurer of the Harvard Law Review. Continued to play on the University Lacrosse Twelve in 1886 and 1887. Have practised my profession in Boston since January, 1888, and am a member of the firm of Hayes, '84, Williams, Baker, '91, and Hersey, '01, originally organized by Hayes and myself in the fall of 1888. Our practice has been very general and has kept me very busy. In 1897 I changed my residence to Cambridge, and in 1906 bought an old farm near salt water at Scituate, in Plymouth County, for the regular summer outing of the family. Have done my share of military service,—eleven years in the First Corps of Cadets, M. V. M.,—and am following it with an equally interesting service along sociological and charitable lines as an officer of the Children's Mission of Boston. Am also a director of the American Unitarian Association. My principal avocation, however, has been the advancement of Harvard interests. This has arisen gradually and naturally out of the election to the office of Class secretary, with which the Class honored me twenty-two years ago. Service as a director of the Harvard Alumni Association, the Harvard Bulletin, and the Class Secretaries' Association, as an honorary vice-president of the New England Federation of Harvard Clubs, as an organizer of the Harvard Club of Boston, and of the general office of the Alumni Association, together with the many pleasant duties of the Class work, have kept green my interest in college affairs. I am a member of the Union Club of Boston and of the Oakley Country Club."

GEORGE LANE WINLOCK

Son of JOSEPH WINLOCK, A.M. (Hon.), 1868; director Astronomical Observatory, and Phillips professor of astronomy, and MARY ISABELLA (LANE) WINLOCK. Was born at Cambridge, October 13, 1862. Entered college in July, 1881, from Cambridge High School.

He began railroading at once with the freight department of the Old Colony Railroad Co., and has continued with the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Co., which absorbed the former. He writes: "My occupation is practically the same. I am freight claim agent of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Co. and New England Navigation Co. Also general freight agent Union Freight Railroad."

GEORGE LANE WINLOCK

SAMUEL ELLSWORTH WINSLOW

WILLIAM WARREN WINSLOW

SAMUEL ELLSWORTH WINSLOW

SON of SAMUEL and MARY WEEKS (ROBBINS) WINSLOW. Was born at Worcester, April 11, 1862. Entered college in October, 1881, from Williston Seminary.

“ My life has been one of at least average activity, directed over the fields of commercial undertakings of various kinds, local affairs of most every sort, including a moderate amount of politics and perhaps a redeeming interest in works of charity and music. The nearest to a hobby comes my interest in all animal and vegetable life, including the joys and sorrows of the so-called ‘gentleman farmer,’ which my experience leads me to look upon as ‘a farmer who cannot make his farm pay.’ ” He is the president and treasurer of the Samuel Winslow Skate Manufacturing Co., one of the leading industries of Worcester, having a large foreign as well as domestic trade. In politics, among other positions, he has been chairman of the Republican State Committee in the ‘90’s and a presidential elector in 1908. He also served on Governor Brackett’s staff with the rank of colonel in 1890. Some years ago he gave the money to build a new wing to the City Hospital of Worcester in memory of his father. He is active in Harvard matters as the coach of the University nine for several years, and now as a vice-president and committee man of the New England Federation of Harvard Clubs. One of the most interesting things he has done as a baseball enthusiast was to organize and play in the old timers’ match between the oldest living college players and the oldest living professional players of the Boston League nine. This game was played September 24, 1908, the proceeds being devoted to charity. The other ‘85 men who played were Beaman and Crocker. Among the professionals were A. G. Spaulding and Schaefer of the original Bostons of 1871.

WILLIAM WARREN WINSLOW

SON of REUBEN COULBURN and MARTHA (DRUM) WINSLOW. Was born at Punxsutawney, Pennsylvania, May 7, 1862. Entered college in July, 1881, from Shortlidge Academy, Media, Pennsylvania.

He took the full course at the Harvard Law School and his degree of LL.B. in 1888. He was then admitted to the Bar in Minnesota and soon after in Pennsylvania. He writes: "Since the last report my marriage and the birth of two children suggest themselves as quite the most important series of events—indeed, as the greatest of the quarter-century—to me. Aside from this I have little to narrate. My work has been divided between law and banking, with some attention to public or other non-remunerative duties. I cannot say that I have been very useful to the world at large, or that there is imminent danger of my becoming so. In the practice of the law I have not risen above mediocrity, though I have occasionally done something that looked good to me. One case that afforded me considerable gratification, involving thirty or forty thousand dollars and some nice legal points, I lost in the Common Pleas Court, lost on appeal to the Superior Court, and lost finally on appeal to the Supreme Court; but five justices of the highest court, after hearing the argument, did my opponent and me the honor of compelling us to return a few weeks later and reargue before the full bench; and their decision then was substantially this: 'This case is clearly ruled by York Trust v. Gallatin; we are convinced now that our decision in that case was wrong; but as it has been the law for nine years, and numerous contracts have been made in reliance upon it, we think that the doctrine of stare decisis should prevail.' I have not yet been able to convince myself that this was altogether a defeat, since I undertook to demonstrate what the law ought to be, rather than what it is, and in this was successful. Those of us who have studied under the late Professor Ames are apt sometimes to find less satisfaction in stating the law than in illuminating it. The published report (218 Penn. St. 524) does not give a proper statement of the real features of the case. A slip on a wet street, a fall, and a resulting intracapsular fracture of the thigh-bone a few years ago have left me lamed, and may compel my giving up some business activities. One of the compensations for this misfortune is the opportunity it affords of watching more closely the interesting development of my babies." Among his public duties are numbered the presidency of the Punxsutawney school board, and a trusteeship of the Adrian Hospital Association. He has taken a part in local politics and is a Mason.

EGERTON LEIGH WINTHROP

SON of EGERTON LEIGH and CHARLOTTE TROUP (BRONSON) WINTHROP. Was born at Paris, France, August 14, 1862. Entered college in October, 1881, from Eton College, England.

After graduation Winthrop returned to New York and studied law at the Columbia Law School, taking his LL.B. in 1887. In the summer of 1885, with French and two other Harvard men, he played on the famous champion Harvard polo team which won at Newport. Since 1887 he has practised law continuously in New York. For a number of years he was a member of the firm of Jay & Candler, and now, with his brother, he is of the firm of Winthrop & Stimson. He was appointed by Mayor McClellan president of the Board of Education of New York City. He is an officer and director in various corporations, and a member of Knickerbocker, Lawyers', Racquet, Metropolitan, City, and Meadowbrook Hunt Clubs.

EDWARD FRANKLIN WOODS

SON of HENRY FRANK and LUCY ADAMS (MAGOUN) WOODS. Was born at Somerville, March 14, 1864. Entered college in July, 1881, from Somerville High School.

"Toiling in the insurance business day in and day out at 32 Kilby St., Boston, for 23 years has been my occupation since leaving college, excepting, however, my first two years out of college, which were spent in the different departments of a Boston National bank. I must own up to an occasional trip to Europe or California. For twenty years I have commuted on the Boston & Albany to West Newton, where Gorham of our Class and a number of other Harvard men are enjoying the customary activities of suburban life. Gorham, Boyden, and I of '85, and about fifteen college mates of other classes, lunch daily at 1.15 at a table at the Exchange Club. We extend a standing invitation to any and all classmates who may come to our town to favor us with their company at that time and place, — the oftener, the better.” He has been an alderman of the City of Newton. He is secretary of the Brae Burn (Country) Club in Newton and a member of the University Club of Boston, and other clubs in Newton. He is a director of the Fourth National Bank of Boston, of the First National Bank of West Newton, and is on other boards of management.

JAMES REED YOCUM

SON of THOMAS SMITH and CAROLINE (REED) YOCUM. Was born at Sweedsburgh, Pennsylvania, September 23, 1862. Entered college in July, 1881, from Brooklyn College and Polytechnic Institute.

After a summer spent with the United States Geological Survey in New Hampshire and Massachusetts he began the study of medicine at the Harvard Medical School. He took his degree in 1888 and then had a year of study in London and Berlin. Upon his return he at once settled in Tacoma, Washington, and has grown up with that enterprising city. He has been president of both the state and county medical societies and a member of the state Board of Health. He has been president of the Harvard Club of Tacoma, a member of other prominent local clubs, and trustee of various organizations.

EDWARD BLAKE YOUNG

SON of EDWARD JAMES YOUNG, A.B., 1848; A.M., professor of Hebrew and other Oriental Languages, and MARY CLAPP (BLAKE) YOUNG. Was born at Newton, January 14, 1864. Entered college in July, 1881, from Cambridge High School.

“In August, 1885, I changed my residence from Cambridge to St. Paul, Minnesota, and began to study law in the office of my uncle, Judge George B. Young, of the Class of '60, who was then in partnership with William H. Lightner (Michigan, '77). On October 14, 1887, I was admitted to the Bar. From June 1, 1888, until January 1, 1892, I was clerk in the office in which I had studied, and on the latter date was taken into the firm. This partnership continued unchanged until the death of Judge Young, December 30, 1906, when Mr. Lightner and I formed a new partnership, Lightner & Young, which is now engaged in general practice in the office formerly occupied by Young & Lightner. On coming to St. Paul, I became a member of the family of my uncle and aunt, and so continued until my uncle's death, which followed that of his wife after about two years. I then became the owner of their house, and lived there alone until my marriage, on August 31, 1909, to Miss Violet Lee Dousman, daughter of the late Hercules L. and Nina (Sturgis) Dousman. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mgr. Kramer at the old Dousman homestead, Villa Louis, in Prairie du Chien, Wisconsin. After several years of active rowing, my exercise has lately been confined chiefly to riding a bicycle and playing golf. I have taken much interest in genealogical and historical investigations." He has been successively secretary and treasurer of the Harvard Club of Minnesota, and an important official in several historical and genealogical societies.

TEMPORARY MEMBERS

EVERETT VERGNIES ABBOT

Son of FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT, A.B., 1859, A.M.; Ph.D., 1881, and KATHERINE FEARING (LORING) ABBOT. Was born at Meadville, Pennsylvania, February 3, 1862. Entered college in July, 1881, from Cambridge High School.

"There is little to say. My vocation has been that of a lawyer. My avocation has been to take a more or less active part in the work for the improvement of political conditions which is constantly going on in this city, and which as constantly calls for volunteers. Neither vocation nor avocation has had any 'incidents,' and in the nature of things both imply a steady and rather humdrum existence. The one 'incident' of my life, when I won a helpmeet for all my work, my classmates will understand without my dilating upon it." He took his degree of LL.B. and A.M. at the Harvard Law School in 1889. Was an editor of the Harvard Law Review, and took the Harvard Law Review prize in 1889 for an essay on "Police Power and the Right to Compensation." Has made his home in New York, and is a member of the law firm of Keith and Abbot.

CHARLES LEE BARNES

SON OF JOSEPH ABRAHAM and OLIVE FLAGG (DAVIDSON) BARNES. Was born at Canton, Illinois, September 21, 1860. Entered college in July, 1881, from Phillips Exeter Academy.

He left college at the end of freshman year and went into journalism, at first in New York and Minnesota, later in San Francisco. There he had a broad experience on the Examiner, Call, Evening Bulletin, and the San Francisco News, which he started and published for some time. Since 1895 he has been engaged in mining in California, Alaska, and Nevada. His address for some time has been Hawthorne, Nevada. He writes the secretary under date of May 4, 1910, sending two snapshot photographs: "I enclose photos as requested. I had expected to be in San Francisco and delayed sending anything. I wanted to find a man with a camera which smooths out wrinkles and puts hair on your head. One of the boys up here has turned out the enclosed work of art, which I trust will arrive in time. Take your choice. I hope you will have a great time, as no doubt you will."

WILLIAM DADE BREWER, JR.

SON OF WILLIAM DADE and SUSAN VICTORIA (SIAT-TUCK) BREWER. Was born at Boston, March 31, 1863. Entered college in July, 1881, from Chauncy Hall School.

"He remained with the Class of '85 until his junior year, when he took a special course in law for one year; afterwards he resumed his college course, and was graduated with the Class of '86. More than usually bright and quick to learn, and with a tenacious memory, he was able to maintain a good rank in his college work, with ample time for social enjoyment. In college he was genial and companionable and had a host of friends. He was a member of the Pi Eta Society and a controlling spirit in society theatricals. He was conscientiously opposed to compulsory prayers, and was largely instrumental in procuring their abolishment. After completing his college course he entered the Harvard Law School, from which he was graduated in 1889, and soon afterwards was admitted to the Bar of Suffolk County, Massachusetts. From that time he lived with his father and mother in Newton, and practised his profession in Boston. Although not tied to law as a means of livelihood he was conscientious and painstaking in all that he undertook. As time went on his health became impaired, he grew more and more retiring in his habits, and his natural taste for books and study became more marked; coupled with this was a thoroughly healthy love for out-of-doors sports and for country life. He often said that he wished to lead a quiet, retired life in the country, and that he should do so when his plans were made. Perhaps with this end in view, he acquired a modest estate in Centre Harbor, New Hampshire, on the beautiful shores of Squam Lake. There he spent the last few summers of his life, and it was there he withdrew in failing health in the spring of 1898. He died of consumption at Centre Harbor, October 23, 1898. He was a loyal and sympathetic friend and a devoted son.”

“After graduation in the Class of '86 at Harvard, I taught English and History in the State Normal School at Monmouth, Oregon, until 1891, at which time I was elected president of the school. I remained in this position until 1902, when I was elected president of the University of Oregon, at Eugene. My work has been almost wholly in educational fields. The state of Oregon is developing rapidly, and the university is developing with it. A hearty welcome always awaits old '85 men at Eugene."

GOUVERNEUR MORRIS CARNOCHAN

While with them he was for a considerable time stationed at London, England, and his first child was born abroad. Later he was with Hoskier, Livingston & Co. in New York. In 1893 he became a partner of Heskett, Wood & Co., and later formed the firm of G. M. Carnochan & Co. His residence was Riverdale on Hudson, and his time divided between his business, his recreation, military matters and service, and his hobby, dogs,—terrier dogs. In 1905 he went out of the banking business, resigned his commission as major, and moved his residence to New City, Rockland County, New York. He now writes himself down a farmer. In 1906 he represented his county in the assembly. His oldest boy is in the Class of '13 at Harvard. In military matters he was at first a member of the 7th Regiment New York National Guard, rising to be first lieutenant and assistant inspector of rifle practice. Later he was a staff officer as aide-de-camp, 5th Brigade, and inspector of Small Arms Practice and Ordnance Officers 1st Brigade, with the rank of major. In the cultivation of his hobby, terriers, he has exhibited and taken the best prizes in many bench shows. He has also been in demand as a judge, and has travelled as far as London to perform such duties.

PRINCE LUCIAN CAMPBELL

GOUVERNEUR MORRIS CARNOCHAN

*ARTHUR DELORMAINE COREY, 1891

*ARTHUR DELORAINÉ COREY

SON of DELORAINÉ PENDRE and ISABELLA BATES (HOLDEN) COREY. Was born at Malden, April 13, 1866. Entered college in July, 1881, from Malden High School.

Corey was one of our eager students. To him his education and studies were always first. He planned to teach. He was essentially the successful scholar. Every step of the way was marked by some certificate of approval from university authorities here and abroad: a freshman detur, a Bowdoin prize, final honors in classics, honorable mention in four subjects, — Greek, Latin, French, and English Composition, — membership in Phi Beta Kappa, an A.B. summa cum laude, an A.M. in 1887, and a Ph.D. from Berlin in 1891 tell the story. His doctor's dissertation in Latin, "De Amazonum Antiquissimis Figuris," had necessitated studies in London, Paris, and the museums of Germany, Holland, Belgium, and Italy, and brought the complement "The Collection of archaeological material is very useful and deserves the thanks of scholars." One keen disappointment he had in college. — sickness in junior year and again in senior year, — compelled him to fall back and take his degree with '86. He was one of the charter members of the Classical Club and its secretary, and active in the Christian Brethren. In Berlin he interested himself in the welfare of the Jews then undergoing persecution, and the Armenians shared his efforts to help the unfortunates of life. He came back immediately after taking his Berlin degree, and died almost in the midst of his welcome home. Thorough, accurate, high-minded, and thoughtful of others, there is no saying what results and honors his career as an educator might not have brought for him. A Memorial "Arthur Delorainé Corey." was published in 1892. He died at Malden, Massachusetts, August 17, 1891.

See Report III., page 70.

JOHN PURINTON FAY

SON of JOSEPH BRIGHAM and SARAH HOUGHTON (PURINTON) FAY. Was born at Westboro, Massachusetts, August

1, 1861. Entered college in July, 1881, from Phillips Exeter Academy.

"After two years in the academic course at Harvard University and at the Harvard Law School, removed to Eureka, Nevada, where I served as superintendent and principal of the Eureka High School, and began the practice of law. Was clerk of the Nevada State Senate in 1889, came to Seattle in spring of 1889, and have since practised law in this city. In the presidential campaign of 1896 my debates with prominent gold standard champions gave my name prominent mention as candidate for United States Senator, but I refused to become a candidate. However, I accepted an appointment by two governors as a member of the Board of Regents of the University of Washington, and was elected by my associates as president of the Board. I have made mining law a specialty, and am attorney for many of the largest mining corporations in Alaska and Washington. My practice has given me the means for successful financial and business connections."

DAVID SANDS FERRIS

After two years Ferris left college at the end of junior year. His only report to the secretary was made for the third report published in 1891. He wrote: "Have lived South during winters on my plantation, 'Ashton Place,' and in New Orleans, and returned North during summer time." Was married January 20, 1885, to Marie Eloise Polk, and has a boy, Colden Livingston Ferris, born at the old Ferris homestead, Throgs Neck, West Chester, New York. Was a member of the Boston, Pickwick, and the Southern Yacht Clubs of New Orleans. The secretary heard of his being about New York and calling on a member of the Class about five years ago, but diligent search in many directions has failed to locate him. Although recent information placed him in Rochester, New York, yet his mail has been returned.

SON OF GEORGE ROBERT and LOUISA MERRILL (TYLER) FISK. Was born at Boston, June 24, 1861. Entered college in October, 1881, under the tutorship of Dr. E. R. Humphreys.

He spent four years in college but did not receive a degree. During all of the time he roomed with Dwight in Thayer. After leaving college he lived in Boston, and entered the Harvard Medical School. He did not complete the course, but left at the end of the first year. Then he travelled for over a year in Australia, and from there went to California, where he was said to be in the land business. He died in California May, 1898.

This interest has continued to the present time. He has had numerous club connections in San Francisco and New York, and usually spends considerable time each year in New York City. His address there is the Union Club.

He remained at college only a few months, and never became much identified with the class, as he had continued to reside at his home in Boston, and had, therefore, but small opportunity for forming college acquaintances. After leaving college his life was somewhat unsettled, but in 1885 he began the study of medicine at the Harvard Medical School.

Two years were occupied in study there, and he then completed his medical education at the University of Vermont, and received the degree of M.D. from that institution. But his health was far from good, and he spent most of the few remaining years of his life in travel. For some months he was in the far Southwest in search of better health, but on his way home he died at sea, of consumption, on August 9, 1892, just before the steamer Columbia, from Colon, reached New York.

GEORGE FRANKLIN HARDING

SON OF GEORGE WARREN and HARRIET MIGHELLS (RUSSELL) HARDING. Was born at Dorchester, October 18, 1862. Entered college in July, 1881, under the tutorship of E. R. Humphreys.

The following year I spent in post-graduate and hospital work, and then took two years studying in various cities abroad. In the autumn of 1892 I returned to Boston and started the practice of medicine, making a specialty of diseases of the skin. In December, 1892, I was appointed to the dermatological department at the Carney Hospital, and in June, 1894, to the same department of the Boston City Hospital. Since then my life has been along the same lines and uneventful." He was for several years the instructor in dermatology in the Tufts College Medical School.

FRANCIS WARREN HASTINGS

SON OF FRANCIS HENRY and HARRIET EDITH (LAING) HASTINGS. Was born at Roxbury, July 10, 1862. Entered college in July, 1881, from Roxbury Latin School.

He spent three years at Harvard. His failing health caused him to leave college early in 1884, but he always retained a lively interest in the class and in his friends whom he left behind. He retired to Weston, the family home. There he purchased, in 1885, both the old Hastings homestead, always dear to him, and the old Warren homestead and farm, which had been in one branch of the family since 1639. He hoped in an out-of-door life to regain health. He resolutely took a hand in the family business, that of organ building, and when the Hook-Hastings Company was incorporated in 1893, he was its president. But his health became steadily worse. The hard winters of New England were too vigorous and he spent them in the softer climate of Bermuda. From 1895 he had to make Bermuda his permanent home, and there he died of consumption, May 11, 1903. He was a student to the end. His tastes were essentially literary, the classics being his favorites, and with the aid of readers he continued long after his eyesight had failed to add to his store of knowledge and to enjoy his favorite authors.

LUCIUS JUNIUS HENDERSON

SON of JAMES and JULIA DeCLIFFORD (BOSS) HENDERSON. Was born at Aledo, Illinois, June 8, 1861. Entered college in July, 1881, under the tutorship of Paul Shorey.

"The incidents in my career are those common to most players, and would prove of little general interest. Sometimes I eat terrapin, sometimes I eat snow, and digest either viand about equally well. Sometimes the audiences applaud me, sometimes they — but no, I can't recall that I have ever been hissed." Is a member of The Players, the actors' club of New York.

On January, 1900, was made president of The Andrews & Hitchcock Iron Co. In the fall of 1891 I visited some of the iron and steel works of England, Scotland, France, Belgium, and Germany. My next visit to Europe was with Mrs. Hitchcock, all play and no work in the spring of 1909. We motored through part of France and part of England. A farm I have five miles south of Youngstown is my principal recreation, with occasional shooting near here and in Florida."

WILLIAM HARRISON HOLLIDAY

SON of SAMUEL NEWTON and MARIA FITHIAN (GLASBY) HOLLIDAY. Was born at St. Louis, Missouri, July 27, 1863. Entered college in July, 1881, from Phillips Exeter Academy.

Early in the senior year in college he had a severe fall from his high bicycle which kept him out over a year, so that he could not graduate with the Class. Later, in 1886, he passed the examinations and took his degree cum laude with that class. After a year of training in the Eastman National Business College of Poughkeepsie, New York, he went to Los Angeles, California, and began his career in the banking business. For a few months he was with the Farmers & Merchants Bank, then with the Southern California National Bank, but ever since he has been with the Merchants National Bank, of which he was cashier for about ten years, and has been the president since October, 1906.

WILLIAM JOHN HOPKINS

SON of JOHN and LOUISA PARSONS (STONE) HOPKINS. Was born at New Bedford, June 10, 1863. Entered college in June, 1879, from Friends' Academy.

He did not take up his college studies until our freshman year. After two years at Harvard he changed to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and received the degree of S.B. in electrical engineering in 1886. "After knocking about the country for nearly seven years, in the employ of various Boston corporations, as an electrical engineer. I removed to Philadelphia in March, 1892, as professor of Physics in the Drexel Institute. My life in Philadelphia was uneventful, except for my marriage, which was an incident of some importance to me. My summers were spent in Newburyport, Massachusetts, where we had a place near the old Chain Bridge until 1901, when I took up my residence in South Dartmouth, Massachusetts, locally known as Padanaram, within a few miles of my birthplace. There I still spend half of each year, and expect to continue to do so. In June of 1903 I left Philadelphia and returned to Boston, entering the employ of the New England Telephone and Telegraph Co. in October of that year, in their Engineering Department. In December, 1904, I had a stroke of paralysis, my right side being partially paralyzed and my right hand completely. This was an event of more importance to me than to anybody else. My recovery was, at first, very rapid; later, less rapid, and I have not yet quite recovered. I have a good deal of pleasure and some profit in writing, and occupy what time I can get for the purpose in that manner." "The Clammer," "Old Harbor," and the "Sandman" Series are his best-known books.

*EDWARD VERNAM HULL

SON OF EDWARD and HARRIET (VALENTINE) HULL. Was born at San Francisco, California, May 19, 1860. Entered college in July, 1881, from Phillips Exeter Academy.

He became well known as a popular and strong player on our freshman eleven, and was taken into the Institute of 1770 and the Hasty Pudding Club. For two years he lived in Holyoke House, one year rooming with Sutton. Junior year he had a room at 60 Mt. Auburn Street. At the end of that year, having had some misunderstanding with his father, he left college and went into business in St. Louis, Missouri. There he became one of the incorporators and secretary and treasurer of the National Hardwood Co. Before his father's death in 1893 they had become entirely reconciled to each other, and had just visited the Chicago Exposition together before the elder man died. He left Edward a competency. On August 8, 1894, he married, in London, England, Ella Nunnemacher of Milwaukee, Wisconsin. He and his small family spent most of their time abroad, nearly a year of it in Japan with side trips to China and the Hawaiian Islands. They then lived for some years in Munich and Paris, where his knowledge of the languages made him thoroughly at home. His death occurred at Paramé, near St. Malo in France, on September 26, 1903. He retained an interest in the Class, the college, and his old college friends to the end. He had even hoped to be in Cambridge with the men at Commencement the year he died.

KIRKE KINNEY

SON OF JOSEPH NEWCOMBE and ANNA (MORRISON) KINNEY. Was born at Cincinnati, Ohio, May 25, 1861. Entered college in July, 1881, under the tutorship of Joseph White.

His college life ended after a few weeks in Cambridge. He was the first man to drop out of the class. He went West and for some time engaged in the banking business in Fairhaven, now Bellingham, Washington. He returned to his old home, Cincinnati, Ohio, was married in 1894, and resided there until his death from apoplexy on December 27, 1905. He had little time in his short residence with us in which to make friends, and afterwards never kept any touch with the class as an organization.

JAMES THOMPSON LENNOX

SON OF JAMES THOMPSON and MARY DAVIDSON (NELSON) (EDSON) LENNOX. Was born at Albany, New York, March 9, 1863. Entered college in July, 1881, under the tutorship of Mr. Willard Brown.

Lennox became ill during the middle of sophomore year and left college after the mid-years. Everything possible was done for him, but not even residence in the South or in the Adirondacks could save him from the rapid strides of consumption from which he died at Paul Smith's, May 28, 1886. In college he gave little time to athletics but gave promise of high rank in his studies. As an invalid he was patient and uncomplaining. A college intimate wrote of him: "He had a keenly analytical mind, and his life after leaving college is noteworthy as a young student's attempt to make headway with the speculative problems of life and death. He knew of the progress of his disease and its probable end, and this was his stimulus to reading and study. His life, thus spent, became a conflict between tenacious religious beliefs and an equally tenacious critical purpose. His memory is an inspiration to the few college friends who knew him best."

PHILIP LIVINGSTON

SON OF LIVINGSTON and MARY CECELIA (WILLIAMSON) LIVINGSTON. Was born at New York City, November 9, 1861. Entered college in July, 1881, from the private school of Mr. A. H. Cutler of New York.

He completed his college course in three years and graduated with '84, but has always been affiliated with our Class. He studied law at the Columbia Law School, and in 1886 he was admitted to the Bar in New York State. For a number of years he practised law actively in New York City, giving considerable attention to matters pertaining to real estate and titles. More recently his activities have been confined to the care, development, and management of large family real estate interests. He has taken an interest in military affairs,—first as a member of the Seventh Regiment, later as one of its Veteran Organization, and at present is captain and commissary of the Twelfth Regiment. He is also much interested in the patriotic societies, and at his summer home at Mt. Desert takes a hand in the annual horse shows.

WILLIAM LYMAN LUTHER

Son of JOB and MARY BOWERS (SLADE) LUTHER. Was born at Somerset, May 23, 1861. Entered college in July, 1881, from Phillips Exeter Academy.

"Luther, Montana, March 3, 1910. Washington's birthday two most unusual events happened. At 5.45 A. M. the thermometer registered forty degrees below zero — colder than I have ever known it to be, this late in the season, in twenty-five years. At 5.45 P. M. the mail brought a letter from the secretary of my Class, Harvard, '85. In September, 1884, chronic sickness drove me from college, and I came to what was then one of the wildest parts of the United States, Livingston, Montana, the place where tourists change cars for the Yellowstone National Park. After leaving the railroad it was eleven months before I saw a woman. In 1886 the ranges were dry and grass short. Stock men had to pay to winter on what was then the Crow Indian Reservation. I wintered a few head of cattle on Clarke Fork, a stream that runs through the reservation. In 1888-89 I went to California, studied law at the Hastings Law School, San Francisco, was admitted to the Supreme Court in the spring of 1889, and went to Seattle. Although the boom was then on the waning side, I found real estate more profitable than law and opened a real estate office in Seattle. In 1892 the Crow Indian Reservation was thrown open to settlement. Miss Grace R. Healy, a graduate of Mills College, Oakland, California, joined me. We were married in Big Timber, October, 1892, and took a homestead on the Reservation. Have two children, — boy fourteen and girl eight years old. For six years did well in sheep business, but lost heavily from the grasshoppers in the three years of 1900-01-02. In 1904 bought an Indian Allotment. In 1906 the post-office was changed to Luther and the mail brought to this place."

JOSEPH MARQUAND

Son of JOHN PHILLIPS and MARGARET SEARLE (CURSON) MARQUAND. Was born at Brookline, November 26, 1861. Entered college in July, 1881, from Adams Academy.

While still at school he was one of the first to learn the game of lacrosse, and when only a youth of sixteen played on the first lacrosse twelve organized in New England in a famous match on the Polo Grounds at Newport. He took a keen interest in that sport while in college, playing on the Harvard team beginning with his freshman year. In the fall of his junior year he was captain. It was about Christmas of his junior year that he left college on account of ill health. Later he made an extended trip abroad with Dr. Eugene Fuller. They spent several months in Russia and a winter in Vienna. The result of the trip was beneficial to his health. Afterwards he entered Blake Brothers' banking-house in New York, and as his health permitted continued his connection there. For many years he was an invalid and had much more than his share of sickness, but it was noticeable that he always kept his sweet-tempered disposition, and suffered physical infirmities with unexampled patience. A friend wrote of him: "Although fond of literature and past history, I always observed that he had the closest interest in the topics of the day. There was no question of politics, finance, or in fact any matter of general public concern, in which he did not have a live interest. College matters were always to him what they were twenty years ago, and I think I have never seen a more loyal Harvard man." He died in New York City, October 23, 1899.

SON of THOMAS JEFFERSON and HELEN ELIZA (WHITNEY) MARSH, Jr. Was born at Waltham, May 1, 1860. Entered college in July, 1881, under the tutorship of H. H. Beach, M.D.

"I went to Chicago in 1885 and started in the insurance business, which I have followed to this time. By combining engineering and inspection with the business have built up quite a successful brokerage business. The firm was originally R. A. Waller and Co., but the death of my senior partner threw the control into my hands. I have combined the business with that of three other firms and bought out the different partners from time to time, and the firm is now Marsh & McLennan and has been for a long time. We have offices in New York, Chicago, Minneapolis, Duluth, and London, and a well established force covering nearly all the States. I spend three or four months of each year in England and have no reason to complain of the results. The work is agreeable and interesting, putting us in touch with some of the largest interests in the country, especially in the line of railroads, traction, and trust lines, of which we make a specialty, giving employment to about one hundred and twenty-five clerks, inspectors, and department managers." When in America he now makes his home in New York, and is a member of the Union League Club of New York and of the Union, University, and other clubs in Chicago.

SIDNEY WALKER MILLER

SON of SAMUEL FISHER and CHARLOTTE (HOWE) MILLER. Was born at Lake Forest, Illinois, January 23, 1863. Entered college in July, 1881, under the tutorship of Mr. B. T. Harrington.

"Unwilling to practise the economy necessary to carry me through the four years, I left college in 1882 and went to work. I was married in 1883, and in 1885 went mining in Old Mexico; but this not proving a success, I moved to California in 1886, where I took up Civil and Sanitary Engineering. In 1890 I invented the 'Miller Automatic Siphon,' to which first patent I have added several more for kindred devices, and at present am President of the Pacific Flush Tank Co. of Chicago, a corporation formed for the purpose of marketing my inventions. In my travels I have been east to India and west to the Hawaiian Islands, but never crossed the Equator till yesterday, mailing you this report from Para, Brazil, at the mouth of the Amazon." His siphon tank received the highest award in its class at the Chicago World's Fair. He is a member of the Harvard, Exmoor Country and other clubs of Chicago.

*WARNER SYMMES RICHARDS

He had hoped to make his life-work that of a physician, and took his part in the Cambridge life of freshman year, making many friends. But when at the end of that time he realized how much of a strain it was for his father to pay his bills, he gave it all up, and went at once into office work in New York City. Always cheerful and hopeful, he worked with faithfulness wherever he was placed, being at the time of his death in the office of Messrs. G. W. Sheldon & Co., custom-house brokers and forwarding agents of New York. His death was sudden, being preceded by only three days of pneumonia, on October 16, 1889.

Since 1885 have been engaged in newspaper work for various Boston and Cambridge papers, mainly in the line of special article writing. Have also been interested somewhat in politics, both state and municipal, as a Republican and Non-Partisan respectively. For two campaigns served as clerk for the Republican State Committee. In Cambridge, where I have resided since 1881, have twice been chosen secretary of the so-called Temple-Hall Party which successfully conducted the second mayoralty campaign of Gen. William A. Bancroft, and a few years later brought to a similar issue that of Hon. David T. Dickinson. A year ago last summer I was immensely delighted to have the opportunity to visit Europe, making a general tour via the Mediterranean route from southern Italy up to northern Scotland, an experience to me intensely interesting and the fulfillment of a long-cherished hope.”

“ I left college before graduation, thus missing greatness by a lap. To make amends I entered Judge John Martin's law office at Topeka, Kansas, in 1884, where I read law with consummate indifference. I soon began to think that politics offered a broader field for my talents than law. To what better school of the higher and larger political sagacity than a United States land office in the deserts of the West? Here my college course quickly asserted itself, and, with a bound, I became chief clerk. One of my first acts was to render a decision wiping a town of one thousand souls off the face of the earth. On appeal the town was later reinstated. I next was admitted to the bar and climbed to the office of United States Commissioner. Into my court was haled the celebrated dual criminal charged with preventing settlement upon the islands of the Arkansas river, and offending public taste by pretending to be a special agent of the Interior Department. Although years have elapsed I remember distinctly what I decided. I held that there were no islands in the droughty Arkansas in the first place; and from what I knew of special agents one could bring neither power nor glory upon himself by pretending to be one. A year later I had another case. A young homesteader debauched the local press by inserting advertisements with intent to defraud, — misuse of the mails. Was I not stationed in western Kansas to uphold the dignity of the mails? The fellow, somehow, escaped to No Man's land, — but there was no escape for me. I remained. Once I wrote a state paper which was made a part of Commissioner Sparks' report to Congress (I think it was Congress). I insisted that the conduct of the land office as defined in the circular of 1856 by Thomas A. Hendricks could not apply to us in 1885. Then stragglers came in wagons drawn by oxen; now they came in train loads. I urged modern vigor and method. We got both. All our perquisites and fees were cut down and salaries reduced! This was in 1889. Thence I marched three stages and abandoned politics, entering a dry-goods career, which is still in the making. A few brief years of dry-goods at Atlanta, Georgia, — rather experimental. For the past fifteen years the unfolding of my dry-goods life in Milwaukee and the appreciation that my years at Cambridge cause me too often to forget and even forgive my ultimate dry-goods destiny." He is associated with his father-in-law in the firm of Landauer & Co., and is a member of the Woodmont Country Club of Milwaukee.

GREENOUGH THAYER

SON of JOSEPH HENRY THAYER, A.B., 1850, A.M., 1864. Bussey Professor and Bussey Professor, Emeritus, of New Testament Criticism and Interpretation, and MARTHA CALDWELL (DAVIS) THAYER. Was born at Salem, July 6, 1862. Entered college in July, 1881, from Phillips Andover Academy.

While at Andover he held a high rank in his class, taking a Means prize for writing and speaking, and the Dove first prize for the best Latin examination. During his two years in college he paid much attention to the classics, and took a Lee first prize for excellence in reading aloud. In the summer after his sophomore year, when just twenty-one, he was drowned at Ogunquit, Maine, in a vain attempt with another boy to rescue two girl companions. Thayer was amiable, kind-hearted, unselfish, upright, and honest, liked by all. As Will Smith wrote of him for our first class report: "Truly, if Memorial Hall commemorated, not alone those sons of Harvard who died in defence of their country, but all those who died in a good cause, as men should die, the name of Greenough Thayer would be one of the first on the tablets." On October 17, 1905, a son was born at Cambridge to Mrs. Richards, wife of Prof. Theodore W. Richards, and sister of Greenough Thayer, who has been named for his uncle, Greenough Thayer Richards.

JOHN RODOLPH URNER, 1890

Owing to trouble with his eyes he was obliged to leave his class before the freshman year was ended. Having been unable to study for some time, rather than drop back into a lower class at Harvard he entered Princeton College in 1882 and graduated there. After graduating he entered Columbia College Law School, where he graduated in law in 1886. After being connected with a law firm in New York City a few years, he and another young lawyer, in the spring of 1890, took a trip out West with a view of possibly locating there. They got as far as Spokane Falls, Washington, where they both found themselves dangerously sick from accidental exposure on the journey. His friend's sickness developed into typhoid fever. Urner, badly broken down in health, was urged by the physicians to leave that sickly locality immediately and try to save himself, leaving to their care his sick and dying friend. But he thought that duty required him to stay and take the chances. After the death of his friend he took the body back to the relatives in New York, and then went to his own home in Pennsylvania, where he lingered three months and then died, on October 30, 1890, aged twenty-nine years, two months and nine days,—a martyr to duty.

See Report III., page 80.

ARTHUR ALLEN WATERMAN

Son of ANSON and SALLY (BLANCHARD) WATERMAN. Was born at China, New York, July 19, 1859. Entered college in October, 1881, from Forestville Free Academy, and under the tutorship of L. M. Robinson.

He left college in sophomore year to go into business. Prior to this he had gained some business experience while an undergraduate as the first manager or superintendent of the Harvard Coöperative Society's store, then a single room in the back of Holyoke House. From this modest beginning and the start which Waterman gave it the "Coop" has grown to a business of over three hundred thousand dollars annually. His career (after his work for the Harvard Coöperative Society and some early efforts along the lines of stationery, book selling, and publishing) has been devoted chiefly to the fountain pen business. It has carried him over much of the country. His residence was for many years in the vicinity of Boston, but in 1906 he moved west to Chicago and later to Minneapolis.

JOHN CORNELIUS WATERS

SON OF JOHN and MARY (CALLAGHAN) WATERS. Was born at Charlestown, April 25, 1863. Entered college in July, 1881, from Boston Latin School.

After the prescribed work of freshman year he devoted himself largely to the higher mathematics. At the end of junior year he left college intending to be out a year, then to return and graduate with '86. He died of typhoid pneumonia July 31, 1885, at his home in Charlestown.

GEORGE STANDISH WEED

He left college at the end of freshman year to go into business. "From 1885 till 1890 I resided in Boston, coming South in the fall of 1890. I engaged in the shoe business in Macon, Georgia, and continued in that occupation until June, 1900. AMORY TRASK WOODBURY

Son of GEORGE PORTER and ELLEN ANNA (BARNES) WOODBURY. Was born at Milford, May 10, 1862. Entered college in July, 1881, from Phillips Exeter Academy.

He left college at the end of freshman year and went into business. He lost touch with the Class after its second triennial. He died at Bellows Falls, Vermont, 1907.

WILLIAM ANTHONY WOODSIDE

SON of FRANKLIN and HELEN FRANCES (WINSLOW) WOODSIDE. Was born at Roxbury, March 7, 1864. Entered college in July, 1881, from Roxbury Latin School.

Woodside's ability enabled him to take high rank in the Class, although he had to earn most of his expenses. This may have had its effect in limiting his circle of college friends, which was not a large one. His death was early and sudden. In the vacation just before our senior year, on August 3, 1884, he broke a blood vessel while bathing at Hammond's Pond, Brookline, and died within a few minutes.

See Report I., page 97.

On his own account he has been the architect of a number of public buildings and is looked upon as an authority on the design and requirements of Y. M. C. "I have been in the cotton business since the autumn of 1885. In Boston during 1886 and 1887; Memphis, Tennessee, 1888 until 1901; New Orleans, Louisiana, Shreveport, Louisiana, 1902 until 1907; and Boston since then. No incidents of importance or general interest, my time being almost entirely occupied by business and private affairs." Part of the time while in the South he was actively engaged in cotton planting as well as cotton buying. For several years he was active in the Massachusetts Volunteer Militia. He is a member of the Union Club of Boston, of the Boston Club of New Orleans, and other organizations.

SIDNEY JOHNSTON JENNINGS

SON of JAMES RODY and KATHERINE SHARP JENNINGS. Was born at Hawesville, Kentucky, August 13, 1863.

He entered the Lawrence Scientific School and graduated in regular course in 1885. "Immediately after graduation I went to California and started work as assistant surveyor in the New Almaden Quicksilver Mines. In 1888 I went to Montana as surveyor to the Anaconda Mining Co. Late in 1889 I went from the employ of that company to take charge of a copper-silver mine in the Transvaal. Going to South Africa with the expectation of only staying two years I stayed nearly eighteen. I was engaged the whole time in mining — either diamonds, gold, or tin. When I left South Africa I was consulting engineer to Messrs. H. Eckstein & Co. and chief technical control of their mining enterprises in the Transvaal. My firm controlled almost forty per cent of the gold output of the Transvaal and employed forty-eight thousand colored men and six thousand white men. During my sojourn in South Africa I married the daughter of an English officer, and four children were born to us, all of whom are very much alive. Since my return to America I have been actively engaged in mining, and am now a director of the Boston Consolidated Co. and vice-president of the United States Smelting, Mining & Refining Co. Life has yielded me many prizes, chief among which I reckon my wife. The outlook into the future is full of hope and interest sustained by the conviction that the Ruler of the Universe is a Power that makes for righteousness." While in South Africa he was for two years one of the town council of Johannesburg after the Boer war, and chairman of its "works committee" during all that time. He was also one of the council of the Transvaal Technical Institute. During his earlier years in South Africa he was connected with De Beers Consolidated Mines Co. and Wernher, Beit & Co. He is a member of the Lawyers' Club of New York, and the Alta Club of Salt Lake City.

"Immediately after graduation in June, 1885, I visited all of the large mining camps of the West, and finally decided to locate in Butte, Montana, then a new camp, in order to gain practical mining experience. Worked there for eight years as a miner, shift boss, and foreman, and in 1893 established an office in St. Louis, Missouri. After the panic of 1893 went to California, and was interested in the management of the mining operations of Messrs. Haggin and Hearst until the year 1898. From 1898 to 1903, was general manager of several properties in the southwestern territories, and in the latter part of 1903 came to New York as engineer for the Amalgamated Copper Co. From 1904 to 1909 filled the position of assistant to the president of the Amalgamated Copper Co. In 1909 was elected president of the Anaconda Copper Mining Co., which position I now hold. Have made my office during my six years' residence in New York at 42 Broadway, New York City, and my home at New Rochelle, New York. Have taken great interest for the last two years in the Harvard Engineering Society of New York, being originally a member of the Executive Committee, and this year am president of the association in New York." He is a member of the Engineers', the Rocky Mountain, and Railroad Clubs of New York.

SPECIAL STUDENTS

CARROLL DUNHAM

SON of CARROLL and HARRIET ELVIRA (KELLOGG) DUNHAM. Was born at Newburgh, New York, 1858.

"When I was very young we moved to Irvington-on-Hudson, which has since been my residence. In 1880 I took the degree of M.D. at the New York Homœopathic Medical College and immediately began practice in the office of Dr. T. F. Allen in New York. Relinquishing a practice which I thought prematurely undertaken I entered Harvard as a special student in chemistry. My personal associations were with the men of '84 and '85. '85 treated me with much kindness, making me an 'honorary' of the Institute and of the Pudding. I was also leader of the Glee Club. I entered the Medical School during its last year in Grove Street. In 1884 I broke down and went to Germany, spending the winter in Dresden. Turning to sanitary work I then spent a year in Newport with the late George E. Waring, Jr. In 1886-87 I finished the course at the Harvard Medical School, having leave of absence to live in New York and do most of my work there, and took the degree in medicine in June, 1887, having taken one also from Bellevue that spring. Since then I have done little strictly medical work, but have become more and more interested in the applications of biology to the practice of sanitation and agriculture. Seven years' work as chairman of the Irvington Sewer Commission some time ago, and service on the Bussey Visiting Committee during the past four years, have therefore been of special interest to me." He is a member of the Grolier and Ardsley Clubs of New York and of the Tavern Club of Boston. His oldest son, Carroll Dunham, 3d, of the Class of '10, has completed his work for the A.B. degree in three years, and this year is entered as first year man in the Graduate School of Business Administration. His second boy, Dows Dunham, is a member of '13. His daughter Ethel married, February 13, 1909, at New York City, Edward Kirkham, Yale '05, formerly of New York, now of Holliston, Massachusetts, and has a son, Edward Dunham Kirkham, born at Boston, December 15, 1909.

ROWLAND RODMAN ROBINSON

SON of BENJAMIN FRANKLIN and CAROLINE ELIZABETH (RODMAN) ROBINSON. Was born at Wakefield, Rhode Island, August 23, 1862.

He entered college with '85 as a special student and stayed for the full four years of our course but did not matriculate. "I entered the Harvard Medical School with the Class of '88 and was graduated with that class. The following two years I studied in Vienna, Strassburg, and Dublin, two winters in the General Hospital, Vienna, one month at Strassburg, and three months in the Rotunda Hospital, Dublin, Ireland. In 1890 I began the practice of medicine in my native town, Wakefield, Rhode Island, and have been there since, with the exception of six months, when I was an assistant surgeon in the First Rhode Island United States Volunteer Infantry in the war with Spain. For about fifteen years I was a member of the commission of the Rhode Island State Institution for the Deaf. Nine years I have been a member of the South Kingston School Committee, also a director in Wakefield Trust Co. and Wakefield Savings Bank. My life here has been very uneventful, living as I have in a country town." He is also a member of various medical societies. From 1895 to 1898 he served as captain of a company in the Rhode Island National Guards.

GEORGE BROOKS SHEPARD

SON OF GEORGE CALHOUN and LEONORA (BROOKS) SHEPARD. Was born at Montpelier, Vermont, October 31, 1864. He was prepared at the Washington County, Vermont, Grammar School.

He was a special student at Harvard from 1882 to 1885, and was closely affiliated socially with many members of '85. "The past twenty-five years which have slid by so quickly have been kind in their forbearance, and, like the skilful writer, are as much to be appreciated for their silences as for their purple patches. Such strains as came have been met and survived; the things that could n't be helped have been endured, and the good things have been most gratefully received and appreciated. Achievements have been modest, growth has been natural and gradual. Prosperity is enough to enable one to meet middle age with dignity if not with enthusiasm. Health and vigor are still boyish and untamed. The great calamities of life, like the great successes, have so far passed me, and I am quite pleased with the arrangement, being thoroughly convinced that the small things are what make the game worth while." He is the assistant treasurer and a director of the Eberhard Manufacturing Co. of Cleveland, Ohio, with which he has been connected for twenty-five years. He is a member of the Union, Tavern, and other clubs of Cleveland.

Of the two hundred and eight original new members, one hundred and sixty-three eventually took their degrees with the Class. Of the remainder, two died during the college course, — Greenough Thayer and Woodside, — three took their degrees with 1884, — Fishback, Livingston, and Mitchell, — and nine, on account of sickness or for other reasons, took their degrees with 1886. Two transferred to other colleges and took degrees, and the remaining twenty-nine took no collegiate degrees, although two of them later took degrees in medicine, and some of them studied law and were admitted to the Bar.

Howard A. Taylor, who entered with '86, completed the course in three years and took his degree with '85, has recently, by vote of the authorities, had his name officially transferred in the Quinquennial Catalogue to the Class of 1886.

SPECIAL ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATIONS

Upon the fifteenth anniversary of graduation the Class inaugurated a style of gathering and celebration which has since become popular among all the classes and tends more effectively to bring the men together, keep alive class spirit, and foster loyalty to and sense of responsibility for the welfare of Harvard. With so many of the graduates living outside of New England the old time gathering limited to a class dinner and the hurried greetings of busy Commencement Day afforded slight opportunity to the returning graduate for renewing touch with a hundred classmates.

By extending the time of the celebration to two or three full days with several meetings of varying attractions the desired chance has been given for really meeting all the men present.

The general plan adopted for the fifteenth was followed again at the sixth triennial and again on an enlarged scale at the twentieth. The details of these celebrations are told in Report V, p. 78, and in Report VI, p. 139 and p. 145.

CLASS ALBUM

On motion of James L. Fisk at Commencement, 1890, the Class voted to bring out a Class album. Fisk, Storrow, and Williams were made the committee to carry out the vote.

After three years of faithful work by Fisk the book was completed shortly after his death, under the direction of McDonald E. White, who took Fisk's place on the committee. It was issued in 1894.

It contains a picture of every man at any time connected with the Class other than those affiliated with other classes, a complete set of pictures of all the instructors in Harvard College during the years 1881 to 1885, inclusive, a complete set of pictures of all the college buildings in 1885, and groups of all the major athletic teams for the four years 1881 to 1885. The pictures are albertypes, and the work was done by the Forbes Lithographic Company. A number of extra copies of this book which had been kept in storage have recently been brought to light. Copies may be had on payment of cost of binding and delivery, five dollars, by application to the secretary.

CLASS GATE

At Commencement, 1901, it was voted to give a Class gate and section of fence to help complete the permanent fence about the college yard. After some negotiation with the college authorities a satisfactory site was selected on Quincy St., where the gate and fence as erected form the fourth side of the quadrangle completed by Seaver, Robinson, and Emerson Halls. One hundred and three members of the Class subscribed the total sum of $8392.03. The gate is the largest and most satisfactory in design of any of the gates to footpaths entering the yard. A good picture of it appears as Frontispiece of this volume.

TEACHERS' ENDOWMENT FUND

When the Teachers' Endowment Fund of over $2,000,000 was raised by the Alumni Association in 1904 to increase the salaries of the professors in Harvard College, twenty-eight members of the Class of '85 contributed $73,420.00.

WILLIAM H. BALDWIN, JR., MEMORIAL FUND

Immediately after the death of William H. Baldwin, Jr., chairman of the Class Committee, January 3, 1905, the Class officers in behalf of the Class sent copies of the following resolutions to his family and the members of the class:

Class of 1885, Harvard College

WILLIAM HENRY BALDWIN, JR.

Died January 3, 1905

The character of William Baldwin was conspicuous for force, rugged honesty, and devotion to the public welfare. His success was great, not only in the material enterprises with which he was charged, but in good works of many kinds which he voluntarily undertook. These marked him as the foremost Harvard man of his generation. For his old college comrades he displayed on all possible occasions those attractive qualities of personal and intimate friendship which made all feel that for us there was a peculiarly warm place in his affections. To us, therefore, his loss is a very near one.

We cherish these memories and the example which he has left, and are thankful that we knew intimately so fine an example of manhood, so true a friend.

and a William H. Baldwin, Jr., Memorial Fund was raised in '85 as a special tribute from the Class to his memory. The total amount of this fund is $5588.96, $25 having been received after the presentation of the gift to the college. The letter accompanying the gift was as follows:

BOSTON, OCTOBER 25, 1905.

TO THE PRESIDENT AND FELLOWS OF HARVARD COLLEGE:

The members of the Class of 1885, Harvard College, have subscribed and enclose a cheque herewith for the sum of fifty-five hundred and sixty-three and ninety-six one-hundredths dollars as a memorial of their deceased classmate, William Henry Baldwin, Jr., who was born in Boston, February 5, 1863, and died at Locust Valley, L. I., New York, January 3, 1905. This fund is given in commemoration of his great and lasting affection for Harvard College. The principles of character and duty which it seeks to instil guided him throughout a busy life to splendid services to mankind along the lines of education in the Southern States, and helpfulness among the newer and poorer residents of New York City. It is also to commemorate his distinguished services as a practical economist. As a far-sighted railroad man he did more than any other one man to solve the rapid transit problem in New York.

The gift is made upon the following terms:

The principal is to be held as a permanent fund (but invested as part of the general funds of the college or university), and known and designated as the "William H. Baldwin, Jr., 1885 Fund."

So much of the income as may be needed to be used to pay, or guarantee the payment of, the expenses of the publishing by the Department of Economics of essays on economic subjects by students of that department. In case any part of the income is not needed for these purposes then it shall be expended for the purchase and care by the college library of books and periodicals on economic, political, historical, or educational subjects in the order named.

OTHER MEMORIALS AND GIFTS CONNECTED WITH THE CLASS

After the death of Hon. John Simpkins, M.C., in 1897, the members of his family fitted up the Simpkins Metallurgical Laboratory, the Simpkins Assay Laboratory, and the Simpkins Ore Dressing Laboratory in the Rotch Building on Holmes Field at a cost of $26,600, as a memorial to him. See Report VI, page 86.

After the death of William Belden Noble in 1896, his widow, Mrs. Nannie Yulee Noble, endowed with the sum of $20,000 the William Belden Noble Lectures. See Report VI, page 73, and Report VII, page 117.

After the death of Robert Fields Simes in 1901, some of his personal friends, both in and out of the Class, raised a fund of $4465 as a memorial fund for the perpetual yearly purchase of books for the Harvard Union. See Report VI, page 85.

By the will of William H. Baldwin, Jr., a bequest of $2000 was left to Harvard University.

About a year after graduation John E. Thayer gave the college $15,000 with which to endow and make possible the Quarterly Journal of Economics.

A room in the Harvard Club of New York was fitted up by the contributions of '85 men and is designated as the '85 Room.

“CASEY AT THE BAT”

Eighty-five takes a family pride in Ernest L. Thayer's authorship of the classic, "Casey at the Bat." It has been recited either by its author or by his baseball understudy, Boyden, at every formal dinner of the Class since it became known to the world. No dinner would be complete without it. It has been reprinted in Report V, Page 88, and the story of how DeWolf Hopper came to use it for stage recitals was told in Report VI, page 91.

During the past five years a whole crop of aspirants to the authorship of these popular lines has sprung up. The claims of some of them have been urged persistently in newspaper and periodical by the column and page. Finally Thayer determined to establish by legal proof not only the exact facts of its composition by him and first publication, but the falsity of all other claims. Among them was that of a man named D'Vys, who declared he had written and published eight of the verses nearly two years in advance of Thayer. The simple fact is that it was written by Thayer in May and published June 3, 1888, in the San Francisco Examiner.

It has also been proved that the paper to which D'Vys claimed he sent it, the New York Sporting Times, had not come into existence at the date he sets for its publication; and the copy of that paper of July 29, 1888, actually contains the last eight verses in substantially correct form, except "Casey" is changed to "Kelly," and it is acknowledged as adapted from the San Francisco Examiner.

RESIGNATION OF PRESIDENT ELIOT

After President Eliot had tendered his resignation to take effect May 19, 1909, the following self-explanatory correspondence occurred:

MARCH 8, 1909.

DEAR MR. ELIOT, — I send you a letter which by the unanimous vote of the members of my class on Saturday last I was asked to transmit to you. In doing so I should like to add my own personal good wishes, and my hope that your activity in other directions may be long continued.

Very truly yours,
(Signed) GEO. R. NUTTER.

President CHARLES W. ELIOT,
Cambridge, Massachusetts.

SATURDAY,
February 27, 1909.

DEAR MR. ELIOT, — The members of the Class of '85, at our midwinter dinner held at the Exchange Club in Boston to-night, desire to express to you our best wishes on your coming retirement from the office of President. We congratulate you and the University that the term of service which had not reached half its length when we were in college has been crowned with such accomplishment. We thank you for the inspiration which your life has been to each of us in the fineness of its aims and the patient steadiness of its labor. And we assure you that we shall endeavor, each in his own measure, to profit by your example in the way we know would best repay you, by increased loyalty to the University at Cambridge and to your successor.

For the Class of 1885,
GEO. R. NUTTER,
Presiding.

President CHARLES W. ELIOT,
Cambridge, Massachusetts.

CAMBRIDGE, MASS.,

November 6, 1909.

DEAR MR. NUTTER, — While I was travelling in the South last spring a letter from you dated March eighth, enclosing an account of the action taken by the Class of '85 on my retirement from the office of President, was mislaid in one of the Secretary's offices, and has just come to light. I want to thank you for sending me the congratulations of the Class and your own good wishes. I am very sensible of the fact that the Class of '85 attribute to me the best kind of influence which a human being can exert on other human beings — a living example of high aims and patient labor. Please convey to the Class at some convenient opportunity my sincere acknowledgements.

Sincerely yours,

CHARLES W. ELIOT.

Mr. GEORGE R. NUTTER.

INAUGURATION OF PRESIDENT LOWELL

When President Lowell took office on May 19, 1909, the secretary sent him a telegram from the Class expressing its best wishes in appropriate sentiments, and received the same day the following reply:

HARVARD UNIVERSITY,
CAMBRIDGE,

May 19, 1909.

DEAR MR. WILLIAMS, — Thank you very much for the kind wishes of the Class of '85. I will try to be worthy of the confidence which so many of the alumni have kindly expressed.

Very truly yours,

A. LAWRENCE LOWELL.

HENRY M. WILLIAMS, Esq.

At the inauguration of President Lowell, in October, 1909, Prof. J. H. Gardiner was one of the marshals, and Professor Winter gave valuable assistance in preparing the speakers for the necessary open-air elocution. A considerable number of the Class attended the exercises, but no Class gathering was attempted.

1885 TWENTY-FIFTH ANNIVERSARY GIFT TO HARVARD COLLEGE

The subject of such a gift came up for informal discussion at the subscription dinner held February 27, 1909, and formal action of approval was taken at the Class meeting on Commencement Day following. It was the vote of the Class that the gift when raised should be added to the unrestricted funds, the income only to be used for the benefit of the college proper as distinguished from the university at large. It was the strong sentiment that no attempt should be made to raise a definite sum, but that the gift should be in every way a voluntary one. The details were placed in the hands of the Class officers. In raising the gift the Class officers have been especially assisted by John E. Thayer, Hoyt, Delano, and Draper, and to a lesser degree by a number of others.

The amount and certain details concerning the gift are to be announced at the Class dinner. The form of subscription follows:

Class of 1885, Harvard College

We, the undersigned, hereby severally subscribe the amount set opposite our respective names to the fund to be raised by the Class of 1885 of Harvard College at the twenty-fifth anniversary of its Commencement. The said fund is to be given to the President and Fellows of Harvard College, to be held in trust by them and their successors, the principal to be invested by them as a fund bearing the name of the Class of 1885, the income to be used by them in their discretion for the general purposes of the college.

TWENTY-FIFTH ANNIVERSARY CLASS REPORT

At the meeting held on Commencement, June 30, 1909, the Class voted to have a double set of portraits of the men appear in the Twenty-fifth Anniversary Class Report, to have the report ready for Commencement, 1910, and to defray the expenses out of the capital of the Class fund, replenishing that fund later, if necessary.

CHIEF MARSHAL, COMMENCEMENT, 1910

Following the usual custom, the directors of the Harvard Alumni Association requested the Class secretary to obtain an expression of the wishes of the Class as to their preference for Chief Marshal for Commencement, 1910, to be elected by the directors of the Harvard Alumni Association.

Accordingly, returns by mail were asked for from the men and over one hundred and thirty-five replies were received. The sentiment was so strongly in favor of Storrow, although many gave the names of J. E. Thayer and Delano, with some scattering, that the name of Storrow alone (after consultation of other Class officers) was presented to the directors, and Storrow was elected by the directors chief marshal of the Alumni for Commencement, 1910.

NECROLOGY, 1905-1910

For nearly four years after the death of Baldwin in January, 1905, there was not a break in the ranks of the graduate members of the Class. Then Brandt died at Brooklyn, November 3, 1908. Crocker died at Fitchburg, February 7, 1910, and after much of this report was in press the cable brought news of the death of Homans at Paris, France, May 12, 1910. Since the last report Kinney and Woodbury, temporary members, have died.

PUBLIC SERVICE OF THE CLASS

The following table gives the public positions held and work of a public nature done by various classmates in their several communities since graduation. It is complete as far as possible, and any information that it lacks is due to the failure of men to report fully.
